LATEST INTELLIGENCE
By Telegraph to the New-York Daily Times.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The House Printer—The President's Nominal Proclamation—The House Committees.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 12.

If some combination is not effected to-night for the election of an Anti-Administration Printer to-morrow, FOLLETT is likely to be dropped and WENTZ elected. This deplorable result will be in consequence of the strange folly of the Opposition in working at cross purposes.

The President's Kansas Proclamation is deemed a gross outrage, clearly pointing to a suppression of the Free-State movement.

The Committees will be announced to-morrow. BENNETT, of New-York, will be Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands. S.

No Trouble with John Bull—The Three Million Mexican Indemnity—The Shameless Conduct of Public Printing—The Insults to Mr. Hale.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Feb. 11, 1856.

The steamer Persia brought nothing of importance to the State Department, in relation to our relations with England, although it did bring more significant intelligence that we may look for no trouble with John Bull in regard to our position on the Central American question. Prominent among the public indications of this character stands an editorial article in the London Times, which I doubt not you will have published, and which argues the question in our behalf with great force, yielding in the clearest terms the construction of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty for which we contend. We know that the Times does not publish articles condemning the position of the British Government, upon such a question as this, by accident; and, even if were not supported as it is by advices of a private nature, such an article at the present time might safely be taken as evidence that the United States have nothing to fear in this controversy, if our own Administration continues firm and faithful.

THE MEXICAN INDEMNITY.

The three millions Mexican drafts have not all been paid by our Government, but only about one-half. The document presented some months ago by the Mexican Minister, and generally announced to be a protest against the payment of the three millions indemnity to the holders of SANTA ANNA's drafts, was not a protest, in fact, but a civil request that we should not pay over the money until the Mexican Government had time to examine the accounts and see whether these drafts were right, &c. This request was, of course, complied with, as an act of courtesy which could in no way affect the rights of either party. The Mexican Government has recently lifted the so-called protest with reference to a part of these drafts, amounting to about one-half the whole, and these have been paid. As the remaining drafts are of a precisely similar character, there can be no shadow of doubt that they also will be acknowledged are long by the Mexican Government, and if they are not, they will be liquidated by the United States without such acknowledgement.

CHARGES OF CORRUPTION EXPLODED.

Some months ago the city was flooded with rumors seriously affecting the private character and official integrity of A. G. SEAMAN, Esq., the gentlemanly and competent Superintendent of the Public Printing. Charges of corruption were rife, and even some of the newspapers were caught by the terrific tales of corruption. Consequently, when Mr. SEAMAN's nomination for reappointment was sent to the Senate at the commencement of the session, it was referred to the Committee on Printing, which at once instituted a searching investigation into the case. A printer named ALEXANDER, was the principal accuser, and he was permitted to call all the witnesses he or anybody else desired, and to examine them in the minutest manner, regardless of all legal forms of eliciting testimony. The result is that after weeks expended in the most pertinacious effort, by sending for persons and papers, and by the most rigid questioning and cross-questioning,

A VINDICATION,

Mr. SEAMAN's accusers utterly failed to present the slightest evidence, or to establish the shadow of a reasonable suspicion, that he has ever departed in the smallest particular from the strict line of his duty. The Committee made a report to this effect to-day in Executive session, and Mr. SEAMAN's nomination was taken up and unanimously confirmed. A more signal triumph over the malignity of disappointed men, who sought to vilify a public officer whom they could not use for their own purposes of plunder, can scarcely be conceived. Mr. SEAMAN's friends—and they are many—are justly proud of the manner in which he has vindicated their faith in his integrity.

HOW INSULT IS HEAPED ON MR. HALE.

I saw the statement that Senator HALE was insulted by the President at his levee a few weeks since, is extensively circulated by the Press of the country. I have no doubt that you received the statement from an apparently reliable source; and your comments upon the supposed fact were certainly just upon that hypothesis. But justice to all parties requires me to say, at the special request of the parties interested, that the story is utterly unfounded in fact. Mr. HALE and the ladies of his family did attend the levee on the evening referred to, but did not make any familiar advances towards the President, were subjected to no insults at his hands, but were treated with all the courtesy which it is the habit of General PIERCE to extend towards friends and foes alike, who visit upon public business the Executive of the Nation.

[illegible]

Mr. HALE has just returned from New-Hampshire, and reports the Anti-Administration Party there united, harmonious, enthusiastic, and certain to carry the State by an overwhelming vote. The election of Mr. BAKER, and the guarantee of earnest union against Slavery aggression, of gentlemen of all old parties, is already doing its work; and the old Democratic Party has lost a host of once devoted followers. XXXIVth CONGRESS—First Session.

SENATE.....WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 12.

THE NAVAL REVENUE BOARD.

Mr. DOUGLAS, in presenting the petition of a Naval Officer, complaining of the action of the Revenue Board, proposed the passage of a law for a trial by Court-Martial where charges are made, to test their truth. This would be doing justice by exposing the wealthy from the unworthy.

Mr. HALE introduced a bill to repeal the act to promote the efficiency of the Navy.

Referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

THE PATENT BUREAU.

The Clerk laid before the Senate the annual report of the Commissioner of Patents.

[illegible]

The consideration of the Central American question was then taken up.

Mr. WILSON said that in commenting the declaration of the President, which had been interpreted by distinguished statesmen and repeated by the press throughout both the east and the west, with the act of the Central American question were in a complicated condition, his people of the United States, when Statesmen are [illegible] these the declaration of some more [illegible] hand to these [illegible] Pacific and [illegible] adventure, freighted with full cargoes, in confident anticipation that there will be no rupture of our friendly relations with England. There was not the slightest alarm in the public mind on that score. People are not to be diverted from what is passing on the other side of the Mississippi by rumors of war with Great Britain. It is not very probable that the Executive desires a war which would shake the foundation of this country to the shores of that Polar sea spoken of by Dr. KANE. There is no such desire for an addition to the free soil of this Republic on the part of the Administration.

The only result attained by the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty has been a prolific correspondence and an interminable discussion, which has settled no point in dispute, and seems to be resulting in a result not contemplated by what the people of this country supposed. He thought this disagreement had been overstretched in construction. The treaty was one not to be made; he thought the United States should at once declare it null and void, and stand then just as we stood before it was made. The course of Great Britain positions as in abrogating the treaty altogether. We need not fear her in Central America. Let her send as many Anglo-Saxons as she pleases, no doubt they would all turn out good Democrats, and make good citizens of this country when we hereafter come into possession there.

Mr. BADGER thought that the discussion of the subject rather aggravated than allayed the solicitude. He hoped the question would not be taken on the referred.

Mr. BUTLER did not look on this question as likely to issue in a war with Great Britain. He commended in the American interpretation of the treaty. He hoped the matter would be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations instead of being further discussed in the Senate.

Mr. FOOTE and Mr. CLAYTON wished to be heard, but was declared by indisposition. He moved a postponement of the subject till Monday, which was agreed to. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Conflicts Among the Opposition in Relation to the House Printer.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 12.

Conferences have taken place to-night among the Republicans, some of whom are desirous of withdrawing Mr. FOLLETT as a candidate for Printer. Several additional candidates will be voted for to-morrow.

A proposition has been prepared by Mr. WENTZ, of Penn., to continue the printing to Mr. NICHOLSON, of the Union, until the first Monday in December, but this cannot pass.

KANSAS.

Proclamation of the President.

The following is the Proclamation of the President in relation to Kansas, of which a telegraph abstract was published in yesterday's TIMES:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, indications exist that public tranquillity and the supremacy of law in the Territory of Kansas are endangered by the apprehensible entry or purpose of persons, both within and without the same, who propose to direct and control its political organization by force: It appearing that combinations have been formed therein to resist the execution of the territorial laws, and thus, in effect, subvert by violence all present constitutional and legal authority: It also appearing that persons residing without the Territory, but near its borders, contemplate armed intervention in the affairs thereof: It also appearing, that other persons, inhabitants of remote States, are collecting money, engaging men, and providing arms for the same purpose: And it further appearing that combinations within the Territory are endeavoring, by the agency of emissaries and otherwise, to induce individual States of the Union to intervene in the affairs thereof, in violation of the Constitution of the United States:

And whereas all such plans for the determination of the future institutions of the Territory, if carried into action from within the same, will constitute the fact of insurrection, and, if from without, that of invasive aggression, and will, in either case, justify and require the forcible interposition of the whole power of the General Government, as well to maintain the laws of the Territory as those of the Union:

Now, therefore, I, FRANKLIN PIERCE, President of the United States, do issue this my proclamation to command all persons engaged in unlawful combinations against the constituted authority of the Territory of Kansas, or of the United States, to disperse and retire peacefully to their respective abodes, and to warn all such persons that any attempted insurrection in said Territory, or aggressive intrusion into the same, will be resisted not only by the employment of the local militia, but also by that of any available forces of the United States; to the end of assuring immunity from violence and full protection to the persons, property and civil rights of all peaceful and law-abiding inhabitants of the Territory.

If, in any part of the Union, the fury of faction or fanaticism, inflamed into disregard of the great principles of popular sovereignty which, under the constitution, are fundamental in the whole structure of our institutions, is to bring on the country the dire calamity of an arbitrament of arms in that Territory, it shall be between lawless violence on the one side and conservative force on the other, wielded by legal authority of the General Government.

I call on the citizens, both of adjoining and of distant States, to abstain from unauthorized intermeddling in the local concerns of the Territory, admonishing them that its organic law is to be executed with impartial justice; that all individual acts of illegal interference will incur merited punishment; and that any endeavor to intervene by organized force will be firmly withstood.

I invoke all good citizens to promote order by rendering obedience to the law; to seek remedy for temporary evils by peaceful means; to discountenance and repulse the counsels and the emissaries of agitators and of disorganizers; to assure their attachment to their country, their love of its greatness, their appreciation of the blessings of its Union, that such a generation of the sons of the Revolution shall not fail in their hands, by their mates to uphold the majesty of the laws and to vindicate the sanctity of the constitution.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this 11th day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six, and of the independence of the United States the eighty-[illegible]. FRANKLIN PIERCE.

W. L. MARCY, Secretary of State.

LATE AND INTERESTING FROM BRAZIL.

Christmas at Rio—A Party of Americans Around the Festive Board—The United States Ship Savannah.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Saturday, Dec. 29, 1855.

If at any time of year an exile feels his absence from home, it is on the return of those seasons in which he has been accustomed to meet his family and friends around the festive board, and enjoy the sweet pleasures of domestic and social life. It is on this account that gentlemen of the same nationality regard themselves as particularly fortunate, when in a foreign land, they meet on the return of such an occasion, under a roof where a generous hospitality is gratefully dispensed. Your correspondent, with other Americans in Brazil, had this pleasure on the 25th of December, current; and, with your permission, he will proceed to give a brief account of it.

Our hospitable host was Mr. ROBERT M. G. GRAHAM, a young, enterprising New-Yorker, who about two years since established himself here as a commission merchant, and who is also United States Navy Agent. His residence is on the Bay of Rio, opposite the city, and two and a half miles from the ferry-landing at Praya Grande. Crossing the Bay in a steamer, we take a carriage at the landing and in a few minutes are whirled through the pretty city of Niteroy and are on a very good road. Looking back at the lofty range of mountains that form so grand a setting to the city of Rio de Janeiro, we scarcely have time to express our admiration of the beauty of the scene, before some one descries the American flag ahead of us, flying from a staff that appears to stand in a large orange grove; that flag indicates the residence of our friend GRAHAM. And how often have we, who to-day look upon it, been ready to witness that LOUIS KOSSUTH was true to nature when he said of the American flag:

> Ah, when the wanderer, lonely, friendless,
> In foreign harbors shall behold
> That flag unrolled,
> 'Twill bear a friendly hand,
> Stretched out from his native land,
> Filling his heart with unmeaning sweet and endless.

We run up in front of a lofty gate-way, which stands at the entrance of the avenue leading to the house. The dwelling is located a few rods from the street, on a lot of several acres, that part of the ground around the house and between it and the street being well filled with the various fruit-bearing trees of Brazil. The house is a one-story cottage, with tile roof, and is spread over the ground extensively, furnishing ample room for a small crowd.

How in contrast with everything in New-York, at this season of the year, is the scene around us! Here are, perhaps, a hundred orange trees, their limbs bending under the weight of the fruit, and here are plenty of lemons, the largest of which are the sweet kind—a statement that sounds strange to those who always associate acidity with the idea of a lemon. Here, also, are fig trees on all sides, the fruit of which is just ripening, and the same is true of the grapes. Besides these, we find the mango, banana, mammee, caju, chestnut, tamarind, and the pitas of Brazil, called ananas. Vegetables of various kinds are growing and ready for the table. Everything is greatly in contrast with Christmas day in a high northern latitude; indeed, we are glad to take shelter from the sun's heat under the broad mango, the best kind of shade tree in the Empire, how long it throws out its branches, and how impenetrable to the sun's rays is its thick canopy of leaves!

But carriages are ordering, and among the guests we see some in the handsome uniform of the American Navy, while the gentlemen from the American Legation are dressed in as plain a style as Mr. MARCY could desire. The company are soon engaged in such amusements as suit their tastes—some listen to the music of a skillfully-played piano, others saunter in the shade of the fine old trees, while the more youthful part engage in these manly athletic exercises in which the noble Romans used to delight.

At the dinner the American Legation was represented by Mr. CHAS. W. TROUSDALE, son of the American Minister, and by the Secretary of Legation. The medical corps, the marine corps and the watch officers of the American squadron were also represented. The chaplain of the flag-ship was present. When it is said that our fair hostess belongs to that class of good wives spoken of by Solomon in his Proverbs, it is equivalent to saying that everything in general and in particular that is necessary to constitute a good dinner was provided. It was enjoyed with the highest zest, because it was in a style and with surroundings that reminded us of home. This was one of the most delightful gatherings Americans have enjoyed here for many a day, and we hope our noble host will live to enjoy very many more.

At an early hour most of the guests left, and repaired on board the United States ship Savannah, where a part of the crew gave a grand supper. The greatest admiration was expressed by visitors at the happy faces and the general good behavior and cheer of the sailors, and particularly at the graceful dancing of many of them.

Those of us who remained at Mr. GRAHAM's, were treated to an excellent musical entertainment in the course of the evening, by the daughter of a near neighbor, a Brazilian Colonel. Like most Brazilian ladies, Miss JOSEFINA is accomplished in music, and delighted us both in song and in the performance of difficult pieces on the piano. Thus passed with your correspondent "a merry Christmas." E.

A Thrilling Whaling Incident—The Savannah and the Naval Board.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Monday, Dec. 31, 1855.

During the present month an incident occurred on this coast which illustrates the peril and uncertainty of life and success among whalemen. The bark R. L. Barstow, of Nattapoisett, Mass., a whaler, was cruising off the coast of Brazil, and on the 14th inst., a school of whales was fallen in with. At 12 o'clock, the mate, DAVID DEXTER, and five others, manned a boat and soon struck a large sperm whale. DEXTER was inclined to wait for the other boats to come up, but not so the whale. He making the strongest demonstrations against the proposed separation, performing in a violent and most rapid manner evolutions that are nowhere written down in the books on tactics. They gave him all the line and he took it and more too, for he ran away with the boat and crew, and when the excitement of the chase was somewhat over, the bark was not in sight. It was now about 5 o'clock, and the mate hauling in what line he could, cut it and commenced searching for the ship. He continued the search that night and the next day, but seeing nothing of her, and having only a little bread to eat, he shaped his course for the coast of Brazil, which he reached on the morning of the 17th. Early on the morning of the 23d inst., Mr. DEXTER came into this harbor and found shelter on board the U. S. frigate Savannah.

Meanwhile the bark cruised after the missing boat four days, and finding no signs of her, gave her up for lost. So important a part of the ship's company being gone, Capt. FOOT decided to abandon the cruise, and on the 26th inst., came into this harbor. The surprise at the appearance of Mr. DEXTER and the boats crew, all safe and sound, can hardly be conceived; it was like life from the grave.

The U. S. steamship Lexington, bound to the West Indies, arrived here from New-York on the 20th inst., all well. The Lexington will remain here three days to have wood baked for her, there being none in stock.

The steam-ship Germania, which departed on the 15th inst. from the Rio de la Plata, is daily looked for, and will call on her way to Europe. [illegible]

THE WORLD WILL

The news which will reach you by this steamer will not be of the kind which the Paris prospect has promised. Not that it will not be, perhaps, of the character you would wish on account of the prominent reason it, [illegible] why they were unfavorable [illegible] military glory [illegible] establishment of a Republic [illegible] are other reasons. You know [illegible] sprung up in France [illegible] The media has [illegible] country, and this fair [illegible] national sin of the people, [illegible] have taken the place of a healthy [illegible] the country to worship for another [illegible] Napoleon Bonaparte, to teach it a [illegible] That is, that the Paris Ex[illegible] beyond the country; the Monde [illegible] Paris.

Toasts were drunk to Russia, and why? Because Russia wants silkworms, gas, omnibuses and docks, canals, railroads, [illegible] and the insurance companies, and the rest of the [illegible] of modern civilization.

Toasts were drunk to Russia, because it is hoped to bring the rude, and unsophisticated population into the vortex of European speculation, in which, while the is being indoctrined into the mysteries of modern [illegible], she will be plucked to pay the price of her education.

Toasts were drunk to Alexander, the great and powerful [illegible] raised up by Providence to give to the world a true translation of the testament of Peter the Greek, that mysterious document which no one had understood to this day!

Russia is a vast [illegible] China, an ice-bound China, a colossal Empire as [illegible] below zero, something like a vast prison, in which are locked up 70,000,000 of souls, [illegible] individuals. Civilization—[illegible] Mahdee understand the term—has already knocked at the door of this prison-house of half [illegible] but an inexorable voice has invariably cried, there is no entrance here! Absorbed, dominated by the testament of Peter the Great, the Russian has been Constantinople and the [illegible]

The Bourse will convert these old Barbarians to peace and civilization, and cure them of their miserable conceit about Constantinople. It is [illegible] the Jewish Bank, instead of war [illegible] will contain daily the Bourse of St. Petersburgh. The telegraph will transmit the state of the Jewish Market to the exchanges of Moscow, Novgorod, Kazan, Tobolsk and other cities. The prices of the market will be published on the virgin snows of the North Pole.

Did I not tell you that the time for the advent of [illegible] arrived?

Already grand schemes are talked of for the Black Sea; [illegible] of steamers are to be put on immediately, to work with the Russian ports of Odessa, Sebastopol, Kertch, etc. The merchants are making preparations for a trade with Southern Russia which will much exceed any trade that has ever before been held with that country. The war has taught both parties, the French say, the mutual advantage which can be derived from a more extended commercial intercourse with each other; there was never any real enmity between France and Russia—the war was rather a trial of skill than a deadly feud, and now they are ready to embrace and be better friends than they were before. France wants the Russian money, and Russia wants Paris to spend it in. Paris will again become the El Dorado of Fashion, the Pagan, the private Sanctum of Beauty, while swarms of travelers will come to wreck their fortunes and their health, as of old. Plus ça ça!

WILL THERE BE PEACE?

The Council of War is indefinitely adjourned. The Duke of Cambridge and other of its members have returned home; but the Council did not break up with much harmony in its ideas, and it is hinted that even if Russia had not accepted the terms of peace, as laid down, it was doubtful whether the Council would have been found productive of much good. The difference in opinion between France and England on various topics, connected as well with the conditions of the war as with the terms of peace, were growing more and more apparent, and nothing but the slightness of the interests at stake would have prevented a rupture of the alliance at the end of this Council. The words attributed to Lord Palmerston: "It may suit France to make peace, but we shall continue the war alone, and we shall be none the less friends of France for that," have had an extensive circulation in political circles in France, and were even quoted at the last meeting of the Council. But the length and depth of the differences between France and England will not be seen till the new conference sits; and then such differences will arise as will endanger, perhaps break the alliance, and thus Russia will have derived all the advantage which she had in view in so hastily accepting the "preliminaries of peace." Since the commencement of the war, Russia has invariably had the advantage in diplomacy; [illegible] she is now going to strike her grand coup, she is going to give her statesmen the severest trial they have ever yet had; she has thrown her fortunes into the play of the wheel of diplomacy; if it turns up positive, she will accept it, but she hopes for and will struggle for a far different result. She [illegible] to bring her out of the new conference [illegible] Russia never can be, never meant to be, [illegible] will accept it, but she hopes for and will struggle for a far different result. She [illegible] Russia regains by again [illegible] Neither will Russia [illegible] of the Austrian [illegible] Who will win and who [illegible] Time will tell. Time will show whether there is a [illegible] behind in the intrigues [illegible] of the older monarchies of Europe.

[illegible]

The Republican School of the Second Empire, true to its traditions, is [illegible] to move on great on [illegible] Napoleon has been [illegible] with the Czar, and has been making a [illegible] for the occasion. The occasion has not arrived; the Czar has been [illegible] if some new [illegible] does not intervene.

[illegible] out of this [illegible] in this Revolution, it is not only a Republican, but a [illegible] It is an [illegible] Republican party. If the reader will recollect [illegible] Russia never can be, never meant to be, [illegible] will accept it, but she hopes for and will struggle for a far different result. She [illegible] Russia regains by again [illegible] Neither will Russia [illegible] of the Austrian [illegible] Who will win and who [illegible] Time will tell. Time will show whether there is a [illegible] behind in the intrigues [illegible] of the older monarchies of Europe.

[illegible] Republican party [illegible] of Napoleon; they feel that they have political opinions of their own, which they ought to express, and a considerable number of [illegible] to enter the chamber has the ground that it is an outrage to their political consciences to [illegible] the service of an Emperor whose policy is in direct opposition to their own. This refusal on the part of certain gentlemen the school conserved Napoleon as the greatest for its establishment. The imperial division, however, was not full until the day of the triumphal entry of the soldiers from Sebastopol. On that day the cadets of the Polytechnic school, who were known upon the Place de la Bastille, and who had already heard of the designs of his Majesty, not only refused to cheer Him, but demonstrated in their attitude even more than the silence of indifference. The Emperor did not fail to notice these signs of hostility, and from that moment the annihilation of the renowned Polytechnic School of Paris was decreed.

One-half the cadets will be sent to the school at St. Cyr, the other half to the Biele Centrale, which hereafter becomes a State school, and you may depend upon it, that when the breaking up occurs, this act of despotism will make a crisis in Paris. So far not a word of this difficulty has appeared in the French journals, and the surveillance exercised over the cadets is so strict that although it is only from them to their immediate friends that these facts are to be obtained, it is only to persons who are known not to be informers that they will confide them.

THE DIFFICULTY AT THE SORBONNE.

And now for the affair of the Sorbonne. I have made inquiry at the College, and find that the following is, in brief, the correct history of the difficulty:

M. Ramain, in one of his lectures, taught the doctrine that there were two moralities—one for the rich and one for the poor—or rather one for royalty and one for the subject. His principal illustration was assassination. If a king committed a murder, he was not to be held answerable to the laws the same as a subject, &c. The students very properly hissed such monstrosities, and one bolder than the rest cried out, "I suppose you get your gown (professorship) for saying that!" The lecture was broken up in a row, and some arrests were made. The next day the same scenes occurred, more arrests were made, and the Professor's conduct was so illiberal to the students that that night a considerable body of them repaired to his house, which is in the Rue de Courcelles, and threw stones through his windows. The lectures were suspended by order of the Police, but the excitement at the College ran high, and in the meantime the funeral of DAVIN occurred. On that day a student stuck up a written invitation, on the College bulletin board, to all the students, to attend the funeral of "the great friend of liberty and republicanism," and this paper M. JAMZAVER, Lecturer on Physiology, tore down. The moment M. JAMZAVER entered his lecture room, he was received with hisses, and saw himself about to be compromised with his class, when he gained a hearing, and by a happy turn of bons mots and eloquence, put the students in a good humor.

After the lapse of a few days, and when the police supposed the students had forgotten their griefs, M. RAMAIN was allowed to recommence his lectures; and although a large police force was in attendance, the same interruptions were repeated, and it was only too evident that there was a conspiracy to prevent the Professor from continuing his course. Arrests were again made, and the lectures again suspended. A decree was then drawn up by the Minister of State, which orders cards of two colors to be issued—one for students and one for visitors, each bearing the name, profession, age, place of birth and other details concerning the individual to whom it is to be issued, and it is hoped that with these cards of admission and a large police force, order may be maintained. Some of the students have been sent home to their families. The renowned old College building, with its great hollow square, time-colored walls, and crowds of soldiers with stacked arms, looks like a fortification in a state of siege, and for the peace of the establishment, I should think the sooner the soldiers were removed the better.

When speaking last week of the funeral of DAVIN, I told you that in the young men of France the country had a future of independence and greatness, and the affair of the Sorbonne is another proof of it.

ARE MOSQUES AND THE SUBJECT CLASS.

Sixty-four members of the Jockey Club of Paris, gentlemen of fashion, of wealth and of liberal views, among whom was M. BAHAYER, gave a dinner a few nights ago, at the Trois Frères, to Gen. GOURGAUD, the Republican General who took the Malakoff; and when the whole party got drunk, as I am assured they did, including the gallant General, there were toasts drank, speeches made and songs sung, which frightened even the domestics of that establishment, notwithstanding they are accustomed to hear Republican slips nightly. GOURGAUD is immensely popular in Paris.

COUNT ARTHUR BERTRAND DE ST. HELENE.

This gentleman is about to be attached to the household of the Emperor in the quality of Ecuyer. He is the son of the Gen. BERTRAND who accompanied NAPOLEON to the Island of St. Helena, and who was born there. When he was born, his mother, the Countess, presented him to the Emperor, saying: "Sire, I have the honor of presenting you the first Frenchman who ever came to this Island without permission of the Government."

In my last I made the error of naming the Baron EYBRACH as Minister of Würtemberg, instead of Saxony. MALAKOFF.

SPANISH AFFAIRS.

Mutineers Expelled from the Militia—Conflict between the Civil and Military Jurisdictions—Change of Ministry—Unstable Condition of things—Revolution Looked for—Condition of the Democratic Party—O'Donnell—The Queen, &c.—The Credit Mobilier Established at Madrid.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times:

PARIS, Wednesday, Jan. 23, 1856.

The prosecution of the cause against the officers and soldiers of the National Militia, who mutinied whilst on guard at the Cortes last week, is going on as rapidly as possible. The council of officers of the militia, which first examined the case, decided to expel from the militia the two lieutenants, sergeants, and privates to the number of thirty-five, whom they found culpable in the affair; this being the extent of their jurisdiction over the matter, according to the regulations of the militia. The culprits are still in the hands of the military authorities, as there is a dispute for competency between these and the ordinary civil tribunals, the regulations of the militia being faulty and not sufficiently explicit upon this point. About twenty-five other individuals have also been arrested, and the ramifications of this plot are understood to be much wider than was at first supposed. It is also thought that another outbreak is planning. The Epoca of yesterday, generally known as the mouthpiece of General O'DONNELL, has the following: "Persons who merit great credit, and to whom we are indebted for some information early, though incomplete, concerning what took place last Monday, tell us that events of the same nature are again in preparation, and that this time their proportions will be greater, and they will be of a graver character."

THE MINISTERIAL CRISIS.

The Ministerial crisis has been solved at last; and, after a severe labor of three days and nights, the mountain has brought forth a mouse. Gen. O'DONNELL was politely waited for by the remainder of the political world of Madrid, until he recovered from his illness, and could give such a direction to the new organization of the Cabinet as should suit him best. Instead of a step taken in advance, therefore, as it was hoped this change of Ministers would prove to be, it is, in fact, a step taken backwards. The power of O'DONNELL is constantly increasing, and his policy is more and more dominant in the present situation of affairs in Spain. The new Ministers are Don PATRICIO DE GERMANA, Minister of the Interior—a renegade Moderado, once Minister during the rule of that party, but who, when hissed out of it, took up the Progresista, and being essentially what is called in Spain, "un Jesuita," that is to say, a trickster and a humbug, has won his way up to the height of being believed in by RALCOMBE SALAZAR, who has agreed with O'DONNELL to make the Minister. His nomination has been saluted by a universal burst of indignation from the press of all parties, Moderados, Progresistas, Democrats, all acting out in unison, at the insult put upon the nation by the appointment of such a man to be Minister of the Crown. The other two, Señor LUZAN and [illegible], are old hacks of the Progresista party of [illegible] standing, and have no political significance whatever.

These specimens of the going in and out of third and fourth rate men under the lash of RAMBLERS, have seem to prove pretty conclusively at last to the country, that nothing can be expected from the [illegible] of the Progresista party. They have had their day and failed, and now the Spanish people are governed under the rule of Pancha Pan. The fact in these appears to be a general lack of talent as well as lack of energy and character in their ranks.

This Ministry cannot last two months.

THE PROGRESSISTS.

The Democrats are not strong enough as yet to claim the inheritance upon the fall of Espartero and the Progresistas. They lack organization, they lack experience, they lack men. All the organized power of the country—the Army, the Navy, the Police, the Civil Administration—are in the hands of their enemies, and they will not be found strong enough in the day of crisis to overcome these disadvantages. They are numerous, full of faith, full of desire, and strong for resistance in the invincible strength of justice and a good cause; they cannot be broken down; they are increasing, and must increase, but they do not possess at present the conditions necessary for seizing upon power in Spain and exercising it. The most probable course of events is that of the triumph of the reaction in Spain. The current of power runs into the hands of O'DONNELL now, because of the ineptitude and uselessness of the old-fogy Progresistas to hold it.

O'DONNELL.

The Army is in the hands of O'DONNELL, the Police and the Civil Government will go completely into his hands under ESCOSURA. His policy is reactionary, but must be more liberal and more just than that of the Moderados, overthrown by the revolution of 1854. It must be so—not because he desires it, but because of the new condition of things in Spain, the strong, frank and noble opposition of the new Democratic Party; the fact that the people are armed; the existence of the new Constitution, just voted by the Representatives of the Nation, and which he will not be strong enough wholly to disrespect.

You may look, therefore, to see O'DONNELL, not long hence, in the position of a Dictator in Spain; but of a Dictator with his hands tied.

After him will come something with its hands free; whether it will be Absolutism triumphant and unopposed, or whether it will be Democracy irresistible, is not possible now to foresee. Something depends upon the course of events in Europe and the East, and the final solution of the problem which is working in Spain may be greatly modified by occurrences with which she has nothing to do.

THE QUEEN.

Queen ISABEL II. cannot be maintained upon the throne for a long time, by either Moderados or any other party in Spanish politics. The throne, however, is strong, and will remain. Who will occupy it cannot be foreseen; the most probable successor, however, has been already spoken of at considerable length, and in favorable terms in a former letter. The name of this personage will readily recur to your memory.

THE MADRID PRESS.

THURSDAY, Jan. 24.

The mail has just brought me the Epoca of the 16th inst., and the Sovereignty of the 19th inst., the former well in the secrets of O'DONNELL, and the latter the organ of the Democracy. You will be able to judge of the signification of the following paragraphs from what I have before written. Says the Epoca:

"It is natural that the intelligence which we published yesterday, of the nature of the attempt upon the Cortes should have made a vivid impression. We have nevertheless some right to be believed from the fact that one month before the events of the 7th, we announced that an outbreak was preparing against the ministry of O'DONNELL, in the Deputies, the majority which would probably take place in the very Chamber of the Assembly. If this occurrence was of no greater consequence than it proved to be, perhaps it is owing to the circumstance that the Minister of War was not present. To-day we repeat that the project for a new 7th of January, and a new 16th of August has not been abandoned; that the plotting in this sense is carried on upon a great scale, and that persons for whom the doors, in political regions, are not close, are not foreign to the plant of the future revolution."

The Sovereignty of the 19th says:

"The Epoca, of last evening, insists in believing that great conspiracies exist against the established order of things; that events of importance are at hand; that the 7th of January and the 16th of August are about to be reproduced on a larger scale; that we are, in fact, threatened with a deluge.

We are ignorant whether the Epoca has desired to produce a dramatic effect, or whether we are really treading upon a volcano. Everything may be looked for from a situation as false as that through which the country is passing.

Nobody is content. All classes murmur; the taxpayers curse the Government which passes them so hard; labor is at a crisis; phalanxes of hungry laborers circulate through the towns, begging bread; commerce continues in a state of paralysis; every Ministerial change carries alarm to the officers of the public Administration; the most frightful anarchy flourishes in our provinces; almost all the people are in a struggle with their authorities; passions are excited; hates grow bitter; moneyed interests take the alarm; fears are multiplied; the necessaries of life go up in price; misery extends itself like a leprosy in every part, and carries with it a suite of vices and of crimes.

Such is the situation; very well fitted we repeat for disturbances and perturbation. Thus, it would be nothing strange if the sinister prediction of the Epoca is fulfilled.

But in order to repel the portion of malice which may be involved in this prediction, it may be well to add also, that it will not be the Democratic party which stirs up any disorder, or which pretends to create any conflict with the Government. It would dread, perhaps, if it were not sure to triumph by other means. But when it has that security, when it knows that without moving it must win the game, and that if it does not win it, it will be because the present Government itself loses it too soon, it would be in the Democracy fool-hardiness, inconceivable madness, to stake upon the card of a revolution its rich inheritance.

No, Messieurs Moderados—no, Mr. Government, do not hope for a Democratic insurrection. Not a single drop of the blood of the people would we give for power to-day. For the conquest of that power we have, thank Heaven, two auxiliaries active enough—yourselves, gentlemen.

Moderados, you serve the cause of the revolution, proclaiming with so much fury the reaction. And you, Government, with your blunders, with your stupidity, with your remarkable ineptitude, with your unbearable administration, with all the abuses which you reproduce, you decide public opinion in favor of the Democrats; you make reinforcements come in crowds to our banners.

By waiting alone we shall triumph."

CREDIT MOBILIER.

The Cortes has at length voted the law granting permission to the Crédit Mobilier, under the name of Messieurs PERIERE & BEHIO, to establish themselves at Madrid. Yours truly,

AN AMERICAN.

Jarndyce in New-York.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

More than a year ago I had occasion to commence a suit on the equity side of the United States Circuit Court in this City. The question involved a disputed point of law, which any one of the judges could have determined in an hour's time. I was poor; and therefore unable to employ counsel of the largest reputation, though the gentlemen who undertook my cause were inferior to no one at the bar, I am assured, in the requisites of talent and learning. It was agreed between them and the defendant's counsel that the whole argument in the case need occupy the Court no more than two hours at the utmost, since it required but the reading of a half-dozen points of law on either side, and the handing in of a memorandum of authorities relied upon. Yet for more than a year, Sir, the counsel of both parties have attended Court week after week, day after day, have brought a hearing of the Judges, and been denied; and when begging that his Honor would at least appoint a time convenient to himself for listening to the case have been refused even that. And in the meantime cases, the whole cause of action in which has arisen since I became a suitor in the Court, have been heard with the utmost patience and decided; and for the reason, I am told, that the legal gentlemen retained were of too high standing to be put off or trifled with.

I am, Sir, to-day as far from the hope of a decision as I was last February. My means, yet further reduced by this exhausting, vexatious, heart-breaking delay, now quite fail, the course which, I am assured, will alone obtain my case a hearing, namely, the employment of solicitors too distinguished to be postponed. I appeal, therefore, to you. Sometimes the pressure of public sentiment will incite to the performance of duties which no ventilation most can effect. If the Courts of this country are to become as tedious and costly as the English Court of Chancery, and if the poor suitor is to be left, [illegible] as [illegible] the suitor in the other, it seems to me high time the people should know it, and begin proper efforts for reform. I am, with all respect, your servant,

JARNDYCE.

NEW-YORK, Feb. 2, 1856.

NEW-YORK CITY.

The Landlords on the Move.

The Landlords of this City were invited by advertisement to a meeting on Friday evening at Hope Tivoli, No. 341 Bowery, "for the purpose of memorializing the Legislature to amend the law in regard to Landlords and Tenants." The attendance was rather meagre, considering the extent of the grievance. There was rather a lack of good-humor exhibited on the part of those who did present themselves in compliance with the invitation. Judging as well from appearances as from numbers, one would hardly feel justified in regarding the assemblage as representing many millions worth of real estate. At 8 o'clock about half a dozen gentlemen had appeared. They found their way to the tilting room, where they hung around for half an hour or so, watching the manœuvres of a couple of accomplished Dutchmen, and scattered only when the players gave up. They then lathered their selves seriously of entering on the business for which they had met, and adjourned to the bar room. Here they gathered into a group and began to talk the matter over. The gentleman who was detailed to represent the Times on the occasion was necessarily led, from the aspect of affairs, to the conclusion that the proceedings would hardly be such as to affect the interests of two bodies so important as the Landlords and Tenants of New-York, and made up his mind to save the "meeting" the annoyance of notoriety. With that religious sense of duty, however, which characterizes the entire reportorial staff of the TIMES, our representative felt called upon to ascertain the character of the amendments proposed to be effected in the laws in question. With this view he entered into conversation with a consequential gentleman, whose remarkable redundancy of speech and eloquent volubility at once marked him as a full-blooded Celt. The nature of the interview may be gathered from the annexed report, which is reduced to a dramatic form, in imitation of the extraordinary dialogues recorded in that "respectable and influential cotemporary," the New-York Blunderbuss, between "our reporter", and the doorkeeper, at some fashionable hole-and-corner meeting of high-spirited citizens.

Reporter—What is the change you wish to have made in the present laws?

Interested Cell—May I make bowld to ask, Sur, are you a landlord?

Reporter—(Conscious that appearances were against him)—No, but I should like to be.

Cell—Then, Sur, I would presume to inquire why you condescended to went to know?

Reporter—I come here to report your meeting.

Cell—We are wadher a bushel of complimente to you, and I must say we are grately suppressed wid your chloqueyshuns, but tare an' ouns, you see, we would look on your departshure as a cordial. We don't want reporters you persave at present.

Reporter—But you can have no objection to let me know what your object is?

Cell—Our objects, Sir, is various. You comprehind that we are only tirpin' to get things diverged into a focus. Suppose me a decint maychanical workin' man, has rooms in a tenement house, an' you and yer fellowman, who are a pair of blaggards, live on the same flure wid me, and when I come home tired and sore from the hyborious labors of the day, an' go to bed, and you an' yer fellowman begin to drink an' dance, and grow rampagious, and get into a row, then if I go to the agint or the landlord and complain, he says "my respectible frind, I can't do nothin' for you; these people pay the rint and I can't put them out." Then, Sir, what am I to do? Maybe the rint the disturbin' an' drunkin vagabonds pay is not more than three dollars a month, and even if the landlord consints to eject them he has to pay three dollars an' a half of law expenses. What we want the legislation to do is to produce reggy lations calculated to degenerate the expinses of rejectment. (Exit Reporter.)

Great Bargains in Houses.

We hear of two mansions for sale on Fifth-avenue, each at $65,000; one includes carpets and mirrors, for that money. But there is an incumbrance on each. The houses are so inconveniently arranged that a woman can't possibly do her work in them without being "slaved to death." If she wants to boil the tea-kettle, she has to fire up a whole range, and to "take the air off" her bedroom she must ignite something like a ton of coal in the cellar. In each, too, there is an army of colored men or Irish women around, under the pretence of doing the chambermaid, cooking or putting things to rights—and whenever takes the houses must provide for them, feed them, clothe them, lodge them, pay them monthly largesses, and take their "ease" with getting. The houses have abundance of rooms; but the first and second floors, consisting of reception rooms and parlors, belong to the world; the basement and cellars belong to the servants, and the attics are their sleeping rooms. If he is careful to keep the keys, the third and fourth floors will be the undisputed property of the purchaser.

There is some other real estate in the market. Some capital houses are offered in the lower Wards at reasonable rates, already stocked with cockroaches and Croton bugs, sufficient to meet the views of the largest family.

In the Eleventh Ward, are several houses for sale. Whoever will buy and occupy them can enjoy from his parlor windows the luxury of seeing all that devoted students cross the ocean and pay hundreds of dollars to see in Germany. One here can live on Yankee pancakes and molasses, and be within five minutes' walk of the centre of the American metropolis, yet smell sour-krout and rotten cheese at all hours, see none but Germans, and hear nothing else than their choking gutterals.

There are houses to sell almost by the block in the Seventeenth Ward, where they have the best Police force and the rankest smells, the cheapest groceries and the nastiest air that the City furnishes its denizens.

There are grand facilities for teaching virtue to youth afforded from the multitudes of houses for sale in the Eighth and Fifth Wards—where the tender infant from the front window can always look on vice, and receive perpetual injunctions from careful parents to avoid it.

Then, in other Wards and in the outskirts are many "loves of cottages" for sale, where, if the windows fit closely, and the cars and omnibuses and ferry-boats are not hindered, and if there is contentment and a baby—there is comfort on the hearth, and a miniature edition of Paradise in the library, all to be had for about as much as a poor mechanic who takes one drink a day is likely to waste in half a dozen years.

The Flogged Boy.

In the case of DORAN against ANDERSON, the school whipping affair, the jury on Saturday morning brought a verdict for the defendant—thus justifying the Principal of the school. The boy was flogged just up to his merits it seems.

M. of that day, at the said Collector's office, and that when so taken such deposition may be read in evidence on the hearing of this matter, with the like effect as if he had been personally examined in open Court. One person may attend such examination on each side, to conduct the same.

LONG ISLAND.

Fall of a Building on Furman-Street, Brooklyn.

The roof of the four-story brick and stone warehouse No. 99 Furman-street, owned by HENRY WARD BEECHER, and in the rear of his residence, No. 82 Columbia-street, on the Heights, fell through at 1 A. M. on Tuesday, taking every floor with it to the cellar. The roof of this warehouse, as is the case with most of the buildings under the Heights, on Furman-street, was used as a garden, and upon it there were about four feet of earth, and some eight inches of lime. The roof was supported by iron girders, and the space between arched with brick, and it is supposed that the recent cold weather so affected the iron as to make it brittle, and not of sufficient strength to bear the great weight. The building was occupied by Mr. JOHN JACKSON as a chemical factory; and had the accident occurred half an hour later many lives would have been lost, as there were sixteen persons employed in the factory, who at that hour had not commenced work. As it was, Mr. DAVID JACKSON and another man had a very narrow escape. They had unlocked the door, went outside to obtain material for starting the fires, and while absent the roof fell in. Mr. BEECHER'S loss is estimated at $2,500. Mr. JACKSON estimates his loss in machinery, &c., at $10,000 or $12,000.

Dedication.

The new Lecture Room recently erected by Rev. Mr. LOCKE'S Church, in Hempstead, L. I., was opened and dedicated on Thursday, 7th inst. The sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. GARRY, of Jamaica; and the dedicatory prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. MORE, of Babylon. It is, unquestionably, one of the finest, most convenient, comfortable and pleasant Lecture Rooms on the Island; an indication of taste and prosperity in the Church.

The Raising of the Brig Wm. F. Safford.

GEORGE H. BRUSH, the contractor under Coroner HARTUNG, for raising this brig, was, yesterday, arrested by Deputy Sheriff MCLAUGHLIN, on an order from the Brooklyn City Court, for contempt, in having disregarded the injunction served upon him Saturday, restraining him from working on the wreck.

Mr. BRUSH appeared, with counsel, in the City Court yesterday afternoon, when the hearing of the case was postponed until to-day.

The Railroads.

The trains on the Long Island are now run regularly.

The Brooklyn City Railroad Company have been ordered by the Common Council to clear their tracks of snow, and put the cars in motion at once. Not a car has been run in Brooklyn by this Company since the fall of snow Jan. 5, and have furnished no suitable accommodations to the public during that time.

Mortality in Brooklyn.

During the week ending Saturday last, there were 40 deaths in Brooklyn—males 31; females 27; adults 23; minors 45. There were 9 deaths by consumption, 11 by scarlet fever, and four from old age.

Fluid Accident.

On Friday evening a Mrs. GARDINER, residing on Front-street, near Hudson-avenue, was severely burned by a fluid lamp exploding in her hands.

☞ On Saturday evening, at the Polytechnic Institute, Prof. STONE gave a scientific lecture, illustrated with a series of experiments performed with CHAMBERLAIN'S Air Pump. A large audience was present, and the mineralogical cabinet, scientific apparatus, and laboratory of the Institution were thrown open for exhibition.

Youthful Burglars.

The Fourth District Police, Brooklyn, yesterday arrested ten boys, between the ages of 8 and 12 years, charged with having broken into and robbed the public school building in Sanford-street of a variety of articles. They were committed by Justice DANIEL E. SMITH to answer.

Brooklyn Dispensary.

During the month of January there were 397 patients treated at this Hospital, of whom 178 were males, and 219 females; 190 were natives, and 211 were foreign born. 1,161 prescriptions were gratuitously dispensed.

Message of Governor of Minnesota.

The Message of the Governor of Minnesota has appeared in the St. Paul Free Press, and we give the following brief extracts from it:

He announces the organization of the Territory on 27th.

He announces that the President had given the assurance that the Indian Treaties would be ratified, and that the Territory would be protected and aided in every way. Affairs with the Indians are quiet and satisfactory.

He urges an increase in the salaries of Auditor, Treasurer, and Superintendent of Common Schools, now only $100 per annum each, and gives the value of taxable property in the Territory as over $18,000 millions.

The President's Proclamation.

In another column will be found a proclamation of the President touching Kansas affairs. After a year of painful observation, at any period of which an ounce of prevention would have been worth several tons of cure, the authorities have discovered various phenomena in that Territory requiring immediate discussion and treatment. They have found the population in [illegible] hostile preparations of the most [illegible] character and design. They have found a Legislature elected by interlopers from Missouri, disowned by a people to whom Congress confided functions of self-government. They have found a Legislature elected by the people representing the one elected for them; they have seen the people choosing a Delegate (Robinson) in the place of a Delegate (Walker) in whose selection they had no voice. They have found the Kansas-Nebraska bill a dead letter, and the authority of the Federal Government disregarded; and, at last, more than a year having elapsed, the first official notice is taken of a state of things to the last degree disheartening and revolutionary. So elegant and prompt, and pacific, is the Administration of President Pierce.

The President finds much to reprehend in this disorganizing and revolutionary state of affairs. He denounces the spirit exhibited by the people, in refusing to be legislated for [illegible] by Missourians. He calls it [illegible] to law, and insubordination. He sets forth with no allowance at the sentiments, complaints, which drove them to arms, when misrule, mocking all manner of remonstrance, threats, and beaudishing rifle and knife, poured into the Territory, with avowed purpose to perpetuate a general measure. He [illegible] of self-defence insurrection. The [illegible] SHARP'S rifles, and bullets and [illegible] the Friends and Indians and [illegible] to the East, and who could [illegible] the slaughter of [illegible] without some demonstration of sympathy and aid—this he [illegible] Nor [illegible] the systematic persecutions of those who were entirely harmonious with the [illegible] in regard to the Kansas question from the first day it was mooted. The Territory was so much full set apart for experiments in bad government, [illegible] Missouri, [illegible] Administration desired some test experiment to [illegible] their social theories, as with Franklin Pierce. His theory was the most pernicious, perhaps, that had ever been devised outside of Fourieritism; and Kansas was given up to it. The progress and splendid success of the experiment must impress every mind. It is a prodigy of social deformity.

But with his evident determination to see no good thing among the settlers of Kansas, it is gratifying to discover a recognition of the circumstance, that the horde of barbarians, mustering under the leadership of ATCHISON, for the invasion and desolation of the Territory, is not a strictly legal and respectable assemblage of persons. We have here an immense concession. True, it is, in all likelihood, made too late. The border slogan has been repeated too long and noisily not to have gathered a vast number of targets for New-England rifles on that disorderly frontier; and it is mortifying to have reason to think that no word censorious of those manifold traitors would have escaped the President, unless under the conviction of its being too late to be useful. Can we judge otherwise of him who, at the very moment a persecuted flock called to him for protection against the wolves, removed the shepherd, and put the most lupine of the greedy pack in charge of the sheep-fold?

The President bids the threatened invaders disperse; bids the people of the Territory lay down their arms and submit to the laws of an illegal Legislature; forbids the sympathy and aid of those outside of the Territory for those within; threatens a levy of the militia, backed by the Federal army, to suppress the insurrection of a people whom those potential arms should long ago have protected, and so left in peace and tranquil prosperity. This is the justice of the supreme Executive. Let the militia be summoned; where shall it come from, if not from the ranks of the very people who now stand in a defensive attitude against threatened extermination? For Kansas is nearly unanimous in antagonism to Missourian interference. March in the military! Against whom will their muskets be leveled? Certainly not against the settlers, for with that guarantee of peace at hand, gladly will they throw down the rifle and turn to the plough and the axe. Fortunately, therefore, shocking as is the logic, and worse the disposition of the Administration, it can take no step towards law, and order that will not operate favorably to the unhappy population of the country. Action is all that is needed. Let the threat of Federal intervention be carried out, and troops be stationed throughout the Territory, near all the points of disturbance, and that will substantially settle the Kansas question. Our only apprehension is, that the recommendation comes too late to prevent one sanguinary conflict at least.

The English House of Commons.

By the Canada, at Halifax we shall have the account of the opening of the British Parliament, and of the delivery of one of those Royal speeches, which are modeled on the principle of saying nothing in a certain prescribed number of fine sounding words. After this senseless parade, the combatants leap into the ring, and the war of Whigs and Tories, of peace or no peace, begins.

The lower legislative assembly of England will exhibit, at its opening, as strange a confusion of parties as recently our own, and a more awkward entanglement of elements than it has perhaps ever exhibited from the period of its foundation. Until the last session, the House, though different regiments of men may have worn a different shade of Liberal or Tory facings, was ranged into two great armies, which, when the trumpet sounded for real battle, are always found drawn up in grim opposing front. Last session saw it divided into no less than five distinct parties, the Ministerial Whig, the Tory or Derbyite, the Peelite, the Free-Traders' and the Irish Brigade. Of these the two last have passed away. With the death of Mr. LUCAS, a man of much coarse vigor and debating power, and the departure of Mr. DUFFY, who, with many of the weaknesses, had many of the beauties of the Irish character, there is not an officer left to marshal the two or three dull soldiers who may cling around the ruins of the Brigadier camp. The only one of any pretension to ability who remains—Mr. MOORE—is said to have bit the nipple on his mother breast, and been put for the offence to nurse upon a lemon. Wherever bred, he is all bitter and dyspeptic of "the brindled cat" school, and mistakes for sarcasm, which he deems his forte, the bilious acerbity of an ingenious self-tormenter. As a debater, he is a mere, clever spouting boy; a Master Beatty of the political stage, chiefly remarkable for using the best language of any man in the House of Commons to express nothing. Possibly, under his lead some four or five may for a time hold together, but as a party the Brigade has passed away. The alliance with NAPOLEON, who, through the Ultra-Montane section of the Irish Roman Catholic clergy, at present by far the most powerful, and hourly becoming more so, exercises paramount influence in Irish politics, has strengthened the ranks of those who had seceded on the accession of the Peelites. Sergeant SHEE, an Irishman of high character and eminent distinction at the English bar; Mr. POLLARD URQUHART, Colonel GRENVILLE, and others of the first standing in that section, have, since the Napoleonic reign in England, joined the Palmerston Party, and no doubt are duly lettered in his whipper, Mr. HAYTER's vote. The Irish Independant Party, as a power, will find its place no more.

The war has equally scattered the Free-Trade or Manchester Party, numbering some sixty or seventy votes. With the exception of the two leaders, Messrs. BRIGHT and COBDEN, and some three of four Peace followers, the Free-Traders have completely merged in the Ministerialists. The security of that commercial freedom, in battling for which they became banded, being now perfectly established, the tie which held them together is unloosed, and the strong way [illegible] the House of Commons with a strength of about [illegible] hundred and fifty strong. Of the pure Whig, Lord JOHN RUSSELL will, when between discontented aspirants and personal adherents, carry some twenty with him from the Ministerial standard, but their defection will be more than supplied by his Irish and Free-Trade adherents, and some strong War recruits from the Tory camp, and his Parliamentary muster will fully make up the number we have stated, of good fighting men.

Around the Israelite leader of the opposition Tory party—DISRAELI—there were last session gathered some two hundred and fifty votes, the strongest party in the House. But there is likely to be this session some falling off in the followers of his adventurous plume. Hitherto he has observed a steady silence as to his proposed policy. But the rising of the Parliamentary curtain will compel the Mokanna to unveil. Should he attempt to avow a peace policy—and in no other way could he endanger PALMERSTON—he would at once lose a legion of his host. We rather fancy he will confine himself to occasionally torturing his enemies with his brilliant lance, without giving or taking regular battle wage.

Hovering around these two parties are several small sections upon whose votes on a death-division the fate of PALMERSTON might depend. There are the Whigs, under Lord JOHN RUSSELL, said to be favorable to peace at a fair price; Mr. COBDEN and Mr. BRIGHT, with some few followers, strong for peace at any price, and Mr. GLADSTONE, Sir J. GRAHAM, Mr. SIDNEY HERBERT, and some twenty or thirty Peelites, strong for peace at the price proposed. These, with a few bunches of oddities of the Henry Drummond stamp, independent people upon whom no one can depend, make up the 656 members of whom the House of Commons is composed.

It may be seen in a moment by this analysis, which may be relied on as correct, that Lord PALMERSTON may be said to enjoy as near as possible a perfect official safety. It is true he cannot bring to a division more than two hundred and fifty of his own party, and that consequently a combination of the Russell, Peelite and Cobdenite sections, with DISRAELI, would apparently leave him in a minority. But the very fact of such a combination would throw a large number of the Tory party, strong for war, into his ranks, and so secure him a triumphant vote. Then he carries at his back the popular feeling, which is in itself a thousand-vote power. The greatest difficulty PALMERSTON will have to encounter is the deficiency of all debaters on the Treasury bench. Sir GEORGE GREY, perhaps the best, is weak and worn, and even in his palmiest days lacked vigor. Mr. LABOUCHERE is as feeble and placid as an orator as he is gentle and estimable as a man. The best man among them—BENNAL OSBORNE—is kept muzzled, being too reckless and impudent to let safely out. PALMERSTON thus at the age of seventy-three will have single-handed to encounter the constitutional learning and official weight of Lord JOHN RUSSELL, the searching diagnosis and scorching sarcasm of DISRAELI, the dexterous sophistry and mellifluous earnestness of GLADSTONE, the close reasoning and practical application of COBDEN, and the vigorous declamation and strong-stroke argument of BRIGHT. Never, even in the zenith of his power, either an eloquent or effective speaker, it will require more eran than his wonted gay audacity to approach such a conflict without some trembling. Still, like LOUIS NAPOLEON, he bears on his forehead the motto "ma destin," and trusts to his star to light him through.

Effect of the Peace News on Wall-street.

Practically, the peace prospects in Europe are estimated highly by our business people down town, if we may judge from the excitement in the Stock and Cotton markets. The scene in Wall-street on Monday was one of unusual animation, and the interest manifested yesterday was not much behind it, though the extreme speculative advance was scarcely sustained. The general appearance of business and money affairs at home are such, at present, as to favor the increased attention shown to Stock Securities, and although these influences are not necessarily dependent on the political relations of Europe, the commercial and financial sympathies of the country with France and England are undeniably close, and while they were actively engaged in hostilities with Russia, and being rapidly drained thereby of their metallic basis of business, it was not felt entirely safe to venture upon large money speculations, irrespective of transatlantic influences on this side. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that the prospect of the early restoration of peace is eagerly embraced to make an advance in Stock values toward the standard from which they receded on the breaking out of the war in Europe two years ago.

The Cotton market has been excited partly and mainly by the same cause, although the news, having reached here just as the estimates of the present crop were being reduced from the extreme figure of 3,600,000 or 3,700,000 bales to 3,400,000 or 3,500,000 bales, derived additional importance from the consideration of supply. The Continental buyers, particularly for France and Germany, had been acting on the assumption that peace was nearer at hand than the English believed it to be, for some time before the news of the preliminaries agreed upon at St. Petersburg. They have taken sixty-five per cent. of the increased exports of the season, while Great Britain, whose Cotton mills will require an addition to their stocks far exceeding any previous year—because of the low point to which they were reduced before the close of the season of 1855—has taken, to the present date, only 763,000 bales out of the current large crop, against 847,000 to same time last year, out of a very light crop. The calculation made by speculators here, is, that in the event of peace, Manchester will have to pay, before the close of the year, a considerable advance on the quotations by the late steamer, especially if the figures receipts at

The Convicted Gamblers.

If a group of burglars, when arraigned at the Bar, were to surprise Judge and Jury with a plea of guilty, and were to follow up the plea by asking, upon pledges of their solemn word of honor, that they never would commit that species of felony again, to be discharged of all punishment, we may suppose the hardihood of the application would convert surprise into utter amazement. If murderers, thieves and pickpockets were allowed to make any such liberal compromise with justice, it would be difficult to estimate the mischievous results. Before the Court of Sessions to-day, come a score of gentlemen, guilty, upon their own admission, of gambling—an offence which the magistrate very properly stigmatized as "the worst vice in the community." They have confessed substantially that their business has hitherto been the systematic violation of law; the maintaining of moral shambles for the destruction of the young and thoughtless; the ruin of thousands, whom they have plunged in poverty and desperate profligacy, and directed to eventual suicide; and on the strength of this disclosure, and such security as there may be in a blackleg's word of honor, they ask to be dismissed harmless. They have, apparently, induced the prosecuting officer to indorse their proposal; and the Judge, having taken two days to satisfy his mind as to the propriety of the thing, is to say this morning whether he will conclude the bargain or not; whether he will compound or not this more than felony. From what we have thus far seen of Judge CAPRON's judicial career, we cannot doubt what his answer will be; but, it would have added greatly to the good opinion which the new City Judge has already created in his favor if he had promptly given his decision.

If the object of punishment were purely vindictive; if the penalty were expiatory rather than exemplary; mercy might suggest that as these persons seem penitent, it would suffice, notwithstanding the extreme turpitude of their crime, to procure from the legal depository of mercy, the Executive, remission of the sentence. But it is to prevent crime that the criminal is punished. It is not for what he has done, but that others may be warned from the commission of the same offence. By transgressing, he has qualified himself legally to serve as such an example; and no personal stipulations, no abject repentance produced by the pressure of apprehension, should be permitted to deprive bad men doing likewise of the salutary warning. The question is not between HERMAN, BERNS, and a score of others, on the one side, and the Judge on the other; but between the Judge, and the evil-disposed, and the young, and the erring, of this and following generations. It is not a personal controversy; the only point to be solved is, what will best tend to purify public morals from this "worst of vices;" and, if the discharge of these corrupt and inveterate offenders will serve that end better than their punishment, then only should they be set at liberty.

And, beyond these special considerations, we should be sorry to see a precedent sanctioned by so good a name as Judge CAPRON's, for forestalling functions legally lodged elsewhere. The prerogative of pardon is in the hands of the Governor. The crying evil of the present administration of law is the disposition of subordinates to supersede the action of the executive, by anticipating the offices of mercy at the earliest stages of the trial. Grand Juries, refusing to trust the clemency of prosecutor, Judge, Jury, or Governor, find no bill against notorious offenders. The prosecutor, prompted by the same distrust, is always too ready to enter a nolle prosequi. The Judge interprets the law liberally in the prisoner's favor, from the same impulse; and Juries, as Judge CAPRON has found to his cost, can seldom be brought to convict, because influenced by gratuitous tenderness for the criminal. Yet no one of these functionaries has the authority for entertaining any such considerations. They are lodged constitutionally in safe custody. From the first act of the Grand Jury to the last act of the sentencing Judge, the process should be mechanical; the exact ascertainment of the facts, and the adjustment of the penalty prescribed by law. At that moment the pardoning and mitigating functions of the executive intervene, if called for; and we know of no instance where they have been withheld in cases where at all admissible. We conceive it, therefore, to be the imperative duty of Judge CAPRON to vindicate the constitutional scheme of justice and mercy; and he certainly can hope for no better opportunity than the present. The application for mercy should follow the sentence; and be addressed to the Governor of the State.

The Streets.

We publish in another part of this morning's paper some picturesque descriptions of the condition of our streets. A born New-Yorker, who had spent all his life in the metropolis, would scarcely recognize the faithfulness of the picture if he had not witnessed with his own eyes the scenes we have endeavored to portray. Year after year the same story has to be told and told again. Since the first of January last, the snow has been permitted to lie upon the ground untouched; nor does the necessity of having it removed, or even properly leveled, seem to have entered into the minds of the Mayor or Street Commissioner until the thoroughfares had become completely impassable. Broadway yesterday was an exhibition disgraceful alike to the Mayor, the Street Commissioner, and the Common Council, whose commonest quality appears to be that of talking when any urgent business is brought up for their consideration and immediate action. Two months have now elapsed since the snow fell, and as it fell, so it has remained, growing black and blacker day by day. The heap in Broadway are large enough to bury a good sized wagon, and yet no one has been employed to fill them up. Even the crossings are left in the same wretched condition as that in which every one just what have contributed to place

[illegible] Have the [illegible] Commissioner of Streets and Lamps [illegible] If not, what has been done with the money [illegible] voted by the Board of Aldermen [illegible] streets? An investigation into this matter might not be out of place, for if any attempt during the past two months has been made to better the condition of the streets, it has been strangely unnoticed. It was the duty of the Mayor to have foreseen this evil and provided a remedy in proper season.

Delays of Justice.

In another column we publish the complaint of a correspondent in regard to delays of justice in the Circuit Court of the United States, in this City. He states that a case for argument that might have been heard in an hour or two, has been pressed upon the attention of that tribunal for more than a year, and a hearing besought vainly; and that the prospect of such an event is now as remote as ever. He has been advised that the only way to get the ear of the Court is to retain counsel of name too eminent to be so put off; but, through poverty, unable to adopt that course, he appeals to the press against the injustice of which he is the victim. The person vouching for the honesty of this statement of facts is too respectable to be questioned.

We must still, however, indulge the hope that some hitch exists in the matter which, rightly understood, would serve to exculpate the jurisdiction complained of. The charge is a serious one. Injustice has no more atrocious form than the delay to administer justice. The old Anglo-Norman charters classed the denial and the postponement of justice together, as of equal turpitude. The United States Courts should be especially swift in their ministrations, as they afford the only legal remedy for a class of suitors, seldom armed, pecuniarily, for a costly or protracted lawsuit. Thither invaders must resort for that protection which the laws afford the results of their ingenuity. Men devoted to the evolution of abstract conceptions into practice, are not commonly practical men. They are proverbially as poor in purse as they are rich in genius. To maintain a paternal guardianship over their rights, as of the rights of minor children; to afford them every security against encroachment, and to punish the trespasser, is hypothetically the duty of the Federal Courts. But for the cost of litigation there, such protection would very generally answer the purpose. Those expenses are, however, one serious bar to the assertion of a poor inventor's rights; and, if the representation of our correspondent be correct, another barrier, still more formidable, exists in the indolence of the presiding magistrates. Judges appointed for life are, we know, very apt to fall into neglectful and lazy habits, unless kept to their work by the stimulus of thorough conscientiousness; and that is one reason why we have always advocated a reform of the Federal Judiciary, rendering the District and Associate Justices elective within their several jurisdictions. We should thus insure a more sedulous devotion to duty, besides destroying those arbitrary peculiarities seldom absent from the character of the magistrate who holds his place for life.

Personal.

What has become of THACKERAY?

A correspondent wishes to know what has become of the great novelist, who seems to have entirely slipped out of public remembrance since he completed his course of lectures at the East.

We cannot afford to make any one man, however great, a standing subject of comment, and THACKERAY has had to give place to fresher men. But he is safe at the South, and successfully delivering his lectures on the GEORGES. He lectured in Charleston last week, and is this week at Savannah. During a month he mysteriously disappeared, and his friends at the North did not know what had become of him.

Mr. CURTIS delivered the last of his Lowell lectures, on the modern novelist, in Boston, on Monday night. They have proved extremely popular, attracting brilliant audiences, and he was pressed to repeat them. He has also delivered them in Salem and in New-Bedford, and will repeat them in New-York before the Mercantile Library, commencing on the 28th inst.

☞ Professor EDWARD T. CHANNING, formerly Boylston Professor of Rhetoric and Oratory in Harvard College, died at Cambridge, Mass., on Thursday, at the age of 65. Prof. CHANNING occupied the Boylston Professorship for thirty-two years—from the Autumn of 1819 until 1851, when he resigned. In 1847, Harvard conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. He was one of the early conductors of the North American Review.

The Southern Press on the Election of Mr. Banks.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I have read the remarks of the Baltimore Patriot on the election of Mr. BANKS, as Speaker of the House of Representatives, as copied in your paper this morning, with great interest and pleasure.

If, as therein expressed, some Southern man, adopting the tone and sentiment of the concluding paragraph of that article, would bring forward in Congress "the restoration of the Missouri Compromise as a finality" to the "Slavery question," and our Southern Representatives now in Congress quietly and sincerely acknowledge their great mistake in unsettling that great and important compromising law, of our wisest and best statesmen, and now give their influence and aid for its immediate restoration, surely nothing could be done more effectually "to meet and set at rest forever" this now all-absorbing and vital question of our national peace—I will not add, national existence, because I do not think it possible for Slavery to dissolve the Union.

But if they will not do this, then, just as certain as God has said there is "no peace for the wicked," just so certainly will there be no peace nor cessation of constant, violent struggle and contest for mastery; and the Republicans' motto upon their banners, now floating triumphantly, "No more Slave States,"—will demonstrate to future generations the full power of justice and truth over injustice and falsehood. "BACHELOR."

Institution for the Blind.

At the recent annual meeting of the Board of Managers of the Institution for the Blind in this City, Mr. COZZENS was reflected Superintendent, eight members of the Board having voted against him. The first official act of the Superintendent after his election was the expulsion of the Matron, Mrs. SARAH S. ARMS, from the post which she has occupied for five years past with great acceptance. We do not learn that any cause beyond the wish of the Superintendent is assigned for this action. The new Matron is Mrs. [illegible]. Meanwhile, Mrs. ARMS does not [illegible] her right, and claims to hold her appointment in an unexceptionable and authentic way. The friends of the Institution are VIVIAN HARCOURT, OR, THE WIFE'S HONOR, is another of those splendid and thrilling stories of Reynolds', which appear to increase in popularity as they increase in number. No single writer, except perhaps Dumas, has been so voluminous as Reynolds. Yet the attractions of his productions increase with each successive creation of his vivid imagination. Complete, 1vol. A splendid bound Edition of all Reynolds' works now ready.

WOLFDEN;
AN AUTHENTIC ACCOUNT OF
THINGS THERE AND THEREUNTO PERTAINING,
AS THEY ARE AND HAVE BEEN.
"Clever chiels an' bonnie Maries
Are bred in sic a way as this is."

This is the unique title of an original book. Unlike the great majority of recent novels, it was written by a man. It is not one of the quiet, neutral-tinted, domestic stories; but a book of strong and positive character. The location is the Malve, under the shadow of the White Mountains. The descriptions of country life have a freshness and squareness, like the native flavor of wild berries and fruits, which cultivation cannot give.

Without much attempt at artistic construction, the incidents are varied, and many of them thrilling. The finding of the child Alfred and the tragical fate of the blacksmith, Bang, are among the most powerful sketches in modern fiction.

In one volume, 12mo, with illustrations by Billings.
Price $1 25.
EDITH HALE.

The publishers take pleasure in presenting, also, another picture of New-England life, drawn from an entirely different stand-point. Some features of it were suggested, doubtless, by the books written a few years since upon the relations of clergymen with religious societies. The book, however, is neither a "Sunny Side" nor a "Shady Side," but takes an independent and impartial view of the subject. The story is full of incident, and the heroine, in her changing fortunes, will win the reader's admiration, as well as his sympathy. The dry humor, sharp common sense, and natural eloquence of old "Father Shaw," one of the author's favorite characters, will commend him to every reader.

In one volume, 12mo. Price $1 25.
The above works will be published Feb. 20.

"A WORK OF ABSORBING INTEREST."
THIRD EDITION NOW READY OF ALLIEFORD:
A FAMILY HISTORY.
By the author of "John Drayton."

Beautifully bound in muslin, 75 cents; neatly bound in paper, 50 cents.

From the New-York Commercial Advertiser.

Written with charming delicacy and fidelity to nature and producing powerful dramatic effects. It is one of those rare novels from which much can be learned of the workings of the human heart, and the experiences of human life.

From the New-York Herald.

It has already had an extensive run in England. In correct yet graphic delineation of character, originality of humor, and benevolent philosophy of aim, we have not for a long time met with a work which pleased us more.

From the New-York Tribune.

It is told with delightful simplicity, abounds in interesting events, and grows in attractiveness to the close. Pervaded by tranquil beauty and natural feeling, as a novel for family reading, it is surpassed by few productions.

From the Springfield Republican.

A very interesting story, written with that charming ease and unaffected confidence that mark a practical pen, and a working, well-trained brain.

From the Yates County Whig.

It is a successful work, and may be safely pronounced one of the best of Scribner & Townsend's Library of Standard Novels.

From the Troy Daily Budget.

It is a powerfully written romance, exhibiting strong passion, fine character-drawing, and all the elements that go to make up an interesting story.

Published by SCRIBNER & TOWNSEND,
No. 254 Broadway, New-York.

AN INTENSELY INTERESTING WORK.
D. APPLETON & CO., Nos. 346 and 348 BROADWAY,
HAVE JUST PUBLISHED
THE
CONFIDENTIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF NAPOLEON BONAPARTE
WITH HIS BROTHER JOSEPH.
Selected and translated, with explanatory notes, from the "Memoires du Roi Joseph."

Two thick volumes, 12mo; with two portraits. Price $2.

From the Troy Whig.

These are very characteristic letters. Brief, rapid in expression, cold, peremptory, even despotic in tone, they indicate the tyrant in almost every page; and yet the extraordinary activity of mind, the clear and sagacious views, the comprehensive plans, and the power of meeting sudden emergencies with instant combinations of action, of which they give such frequent evidence, would give them an interest, even if they related to events less important than those in which Napoleon bore a part.

Tender missives will fly, and fair maidens, though shy,

To tell their hearts' feelings in song;
And the scene will speak, both the strong and the weak,
Through Love's chosen interpreter, STRONG.

Our postmen in town, will be apt to break down
"Beath the weight of Strong's Valentines;"
We shall all know his store, by the crowd at the door,
And all purchase our VALENTINES there.
Youths, widows and maids of all classes and grades,
Who have waited for partners too long,
An impression will make, if the Valentines take,
From the splendid assortment of STRONG.

Say the custom is vulgar and low;
Young America goes, for fun "under the rose,"
And each girl hopes to hear from her beau.
Each friend that one meets, talks of STRONG's pictured [sheets,
Takes one's arm and shouts out "Come along,
Let us hasten and choose, rich and rare billet doux,
From the matchless collection of STRONG."

Such delicious designs, such original lines,
Both comic and tender and true,
Never came into play, since on Valentine's day,
Human doves first to bill and to coo.
All manner of themes, of which Love ever dreams,
Tender thoughts made melodious in song,
With good-natured jokes, meant for queer kind of folks,

A New Light.—KEROSENE OR COAL OIL—Secured by Patents. The intensity of the light obtained from this oil will be found to exceed that of any other oil or liquid heretofore known to the public.

This oil being a pure distillation from coal, without the admixture of Spirits of Turpentine or Alcohol, is warranted to be not explosive. Insurance Companies allow it to be used without additional premium.

Those who read or write much at night will find it a great acquisition, as the light is remarkably steady and soft to the eye.

It burns brilliantly, without smoking or crusting the wick, does not deteriorate or evaporate by exposure, and is not affected by the coldest weather.

The various patented lamps to be found at the store of the undersigned, are recommended as the best adapted to the peculiar qualities of the oil, each lamp giving a light equal to two six-foot gas burners.

This oil can be used in Camphene and Sylvic Oil Lamps, and can be adapted to chandeliers for hotels, country residences and steamers.

[illegible] The Matter of the Appeals of the Bowery—[illegible]

[illegible] Justice Hoffman, rendered an opinion [illegible] decided that the confirmation [illegible] the report of Commissioners at Special [illegible] To this, however, Mr. Justice [illegible] dissented.

[illegible] Hoffman is one of great importance, inasmuch as it is a step in any appeal from the [illegible] in regard to the Central Park.

[illegible] The proceedings in this case [illegible] proceedings is wholly derived from [illegible] and that jurisdiction is to be exercised [illegible] years the judges of the Court regard themselves as sitting in the capacity of Commissioners, vested with limited powers by the Legislature [illegible] proceedings, and not as a [illegible] This theory no longer prevails [illegible] that the Court, in [illegible] limited power conferred exclusively by the provisions of the Statute relating to such proceedings.

[illegible] Corporation of New-York, having resolved upon the improvement, is authorized to make application to the Court for the appointment of Commissioners, and it is declared [illegible] shall be lawful for the Court upon [illegible] to nominate and appoint three [illegible] disinterested persons Commissioners [illegible] Commissioners, so appointed, are required [illegible] their report to the Court, and upon [illegible] report it is made the duty of the [illegible] Court, either to confirm it or send [illegible] back for revision. If it is sent back, it may be to [illegible] new Commissioners, in the discretion of [illegible] If a new report is made, the Court may [illegible] it back for revision, and so on [illegible] the Court shall think proper to confirm [illegible]

The power thus vested in the Court is superintendent and not appellate. It was evidently the intention of the Legislature to vest in the Court a [illegible] discretion in the exercise of this power. It [illegible] to be presumed that no injustice is done. Technical [illegible] will be disregarded, and if, upon a review of [illegible] it appears that substantial justice [illegible] by the Commissioners, then proceedings will be confirmed.

It is not to be supposed that the exercise of a power so entirely discretionary would be made the subject of review upon appeal. Hence we find it [illegible] that the report, when confirmed by the Court, shall be final and conclusive upon all parties, [illegible] to the property proposed to be taken [illegible] improvement shall, upon such confirmation, vest in the Corporation.

[illegible] clear that the application to the Court for a confirmation of the report of the Commissioners for public purposes thus provides [illegible] a special proceeding, within the meaning of that [illegible] it is defined in the third section of the Code, [illegible] that every other remedy, except [illegible] obtained by an action, is a special proceeding. [illegible] I suppose, are spoken of in the present of a Court of general jurisdiction, such as mandamus, prohibition, habeas corpus, etc. I do not think that the proceedings before the Commissioners of the report of the Commissioners, as the Statute referred to is, is a remedy.

[illegible] this point, and that the application for the order of confirmation is a special proceeding, I do not think the decision of the Court upon such application is the subject of review upon appeal. It is contended by the 11th section of the Code, among other things, that the Court of Appeals shall have jurisdiction to review upon appeal every actual determination of the Supreme Court in General Term, in a final order affecting a substantial right, made in a special proceeding." The order of confirmation is a final order. It affects substantial rights. For the purpose of the argument, it is conceded to be a special proceeding. The order, it is conceded, may be made by the Supreme Court at a General Term. The question is then brought within the very terms of the section of the Code prescribing the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeals. And yet it has just been held by this Court that it has no jurisdiction to review an appeal such an order. This jurisdiction is denied upon the ground that, though the words are within the very letter of the statute defining the jurisdiction of the Court, yet it is taken away by the statute under which the proceedings originate, which declares "that the order or judgment of the Court in the premises shall be final and conclusive."

If this be so, in respect to an appeal from the general term to the Court of Appeals, I cannot see why it is not equally true in respect to an appeal from an order made at special term to the general term. The order, when made at Special Term, is no more the order of the Supreme Court than when made at General Term. In either case it is "the order or judgment of the Supreme Court in the premises." The order, it is declared, shall be final and conclusive. And yet, by this appeal, it is insisted that the order thus made is not final and conclusive, and that this Court has the power, and ought to review it.

This power is sought to be sustained by the act of 1854, which declares that the appeal may be taken to the general term from any judgment, order or decision of the Supreme Court made at a special term, in any special proceeding. As in the case of the eleventh section of the Code defining the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeals, so here, the language of the statute is broad enough to embrace the case in question. But the statute which declares that the Court of Appeals shall have jurisdiction to review an order of the Supreme Court made in a special proceeding, is controlled by the statute relating to the special proceeding in question, which declares that the order confirming the report shall be final and conclusive. I am entirely unable to see how it is that the same declaration in respect to the same order does not equally control the act of 1854 providing for an appeal to the general term from an order at the special term in a special proceeding. Again, the Commissioners are required to make their report to the Supreme Court. That has been done. The Court, upon the coming in of the report, is empowered to hear any matter that may be alleged against it. That has been done. Having heard what has been alleged against it, the Court is required to make an order. That has been done. The order thus made must be one of two things. It must confirm or vacate the report. Now, if the Commissioners, acting upon the report for reconsideration, The Court has been done in this case, and the Court has done it, the statute declares that it is final and conclusive. Now suppose this Court, in passing upon the order, to hold that the order thus made is contrary to the provisions of the statutes, in such case the statute declares it shall be final and conclusive, and that it will entertain the appeal, upon which principle shall the review be had? We have seen that it is the duty of the Court, upon the hearing of the Report, to hear what can be alleged against it, whether it be in respect to matters of fact or law, and if, upon the whole, it appears that no substantial injustice has been done, to confirm the report. The very nature of this hearing, involving, as it does, the exercise of judicial discretion, if not, if anything else, is opposed to our very first notions of a review upon appeal. There is no more familiar rule than that an appeal will not lie from an order which the Court was authorized to make or not, in the own discretion. "It would be [illegible] to our notions of the plan of our judiciary system," says Judge Parker, in delivering the opinion of the Court of Appeals, in the matter of the New-York Central Railroad Company vs. Marvin, 11 Kerman, 276, "to suppose that it was intended that the questions of law almost always involved in appeals from interlocutory or discretionary orders, should be disposed of, in the last resort, by the Court of last resort." The maxim, that "law is applied with equal force to an appeal from the special to the general term. "The whole proceeding," says the same learned Judge, "is a special creation of the statute, and seems designed to form a complete system of itself, authorized independent of the general provisions of law relating to appeals." So, in this case, I am of opinion that the general provisions of the Act of 1854, authorizing an appeal from an order of a special term in a special proceeding, as well as the provision of the eleventh section of the Code authorizing a review, upon appeal to the Court of Appeals, of an order of this Court made at general term in a special proceeding, have no application whatever to the proceedings in question, and that the statutes in relation to hearing the appeal should therefore be omitted.

Mr. Justice Parker also rendered an opinion, concurring with the decision of the Court. In it he says:

[illegible] it is said that the Statute of 1854 expressly authorizes appeals to the general term from any order made at a special term in any special proceeding. This is a special proceeding, the language of the statute, and appeals from orders may be included in the terms of the general provisions and regulations, as general term. But this statute is a general law, and the provisions and regulations, as general term. It is a general law, and the provisions and regulations, as general term. It is a general law, and the provisions and regulations, as general term. It does not specially authorize an appeal from the order in question, but it does authorize an appeal from the order in question, but it does authorize an appeal from the order in question, but it does

PRIVATE CONSULTATIONS.

DR. WATSON continues his practice in certain diseases of a delicate character, which have resisted many other practitioners, and which have been the bane of hundreds of thousands of the human family. The many cures in these diseases, which have been effected by Dr. Watson, are known to the public, and it is a fact, that many persons have consulted the physicians of certain other institutions, have been injured by improper treatment, and are respectfully invited to call, in the first place, on Dr. Watson, in no chance for connection.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.—Mr. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds, a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over 1,100 cases, and never failed, except in two cases, both Chronic humors. He has now in his possession over 250 certificates of 100 virulent, all within 20 miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a running sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humors in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

Reader, I peddled over a thousand bottles of this in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. So sure as water will extinguish fire, so sure will this cure humor. I never sold a bottle of it but that sold another; the reason is plain, it speaks for itself. There are two things about this herb that appear to me remarkable; first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet its value has never been known until I discovered it in 1846; second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and great popularity of this medicine, I would state that in April, 1854, I peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day. In April, 1854, I sold over a thousand bottles per day.

No change of diet ever necessary—eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

Extraordinary Test Case.—Adelia, one table spoonful per day; aged to cure 8 years; diseased scrofula; children from 4 to 8 years, ten spoonfuls. As no direction can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.

Mr. KENNEDY gives personal attendance in bad cases of Scrofula.

TRIESEMAR.—THE GREAT EUROPEAN DISCOVERY.—Protected by Royal Letters Patent of England, and secured by the sales of the Circle de Pharmacie de Paris, and the Imperial College of Medicine, Vienna.

TRIESEMAR No. 1.—Is the remedy of general and local debility, loss of virile power, premature decay, and all the distressing consequences arising from early abuse, &c. Its effects are efficacious in youth, manhood and old age; the virile powers would not become impaired, even in the debauchee, if the Triesemar Tablets were adopted; all physical impediments vanish like magic before its influence, thus rendering its use invaluable to those entering the marriage state.

TRIESEMAR No. 2.—Completely and entirely eradicates all trace of those disorders which copaiva and cubebs have so long been thought an infallible cure, to the ruin of the health of a vast portion of the population.

TRIESEMAR No. 3—Is the great European remedy for that class of disorders which unfortunately the English Physician treats with mercury, to the inevitable destruction of the patient's constitution, and which all the Sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove.

TRIESEMAR No. 1, 2 and 3, are alike devoid of taste or smell, and all nauseating qualities. They may lay on the toilet table without their use being detected.

Sold in fin cases at $3 each, or four cases in one for $9, which saves $3; and in $27 cases, whereby there is a saving of $9; divided into separate doses, as administered by Valentine Mott, Esq., &c.

RICORD'S PRACTICE.—The undersigned, formerly a pupil with RICORD, of Paris, and with the second surgeon of the Venerian Hospital of Old Paris, and Morrs, may be consulted, confidentially, in his specialty, at his conveniently located rooms, No. 146 Broadway, opposite the St. Nicholas Hotel, from 9 to 1 o'clock, and from 5 to 8, daily. He tenders to all afflicted positive assurance of relief, and those who have been abused by "specifics," antidotes, books, "no-mercury," and like effusions of the unlearned and unskilled charlatan, may rely on having their cases treated effectually, no matter how complicated they may appear. His extended observations in the famous Hospital du Midi, in Paris, under RICORD himself, together with the many new and efficient remedies of this eminent surgeon, render failure impossible. For the information of the public, it is proper here to state, that RICORD'S PRACTICE in sexual derangements, which also includes the diseases of these organs, is the modern and only rational system (combining rapidity of cure with entire safety to the constitution) recognized by science, as it expressly rejects the old, empirical, secret and hazardous employment of such pretended specifics as copaiva, cubebs, balsam, tincture, &c. Recent cases cured without any delay, and the most candid information given in every instance. The subscriber's treatment of CONSUMPTION, constitutional, scrofulous, mercurial and nervous diseases, is based entirely on the modern and improved science of medicine, and has been eminently successful. Treatment by letter, and the remedies, securely sealed, forwarded. Consultations on Physics.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Flour Inspection.

Acting on the suggestion of the Times and one of the Committees, the Flour merchants and dealers of this City, convened a meeting yesterday immediately after Business hours at the Corn Exchange, to take into consideration the subject of flour inspection, and to ascertain what measures should be taken to restore the character of the New-York flour inspection. N. E. Weeks, Esq., President of the Corn Exchange, acted as Chairman, and Mr. Wm. Wharton as Secretary. Mr. Edwards Pierrepont suggested that a Committee could reach the evil complained of, sooner than the whole body of flour dealers, and successfully moved the appointment of a Committee of Six, to which, on motion, the President was afterwards unanimously added. The Committee is as follows: N. H. Wolfe, Stephen Whitney, John J. Kingsford, David Dows, R. P. Wilson, Jacob I. Neeves and Isaac H. Reed. This committee will bring large experience to the investigation of the subject, and we hope for a satisfactory result from its labors.

A Countenance Gifted.

A Daughter of Cain is an artful young female, apparently never twenty years of age, who plays with open street passengers, to which we were an eyewitness the other day. She is dressed with the greatest of rags, which do not seem to bear a relation to any special garment, and wears on one foot a buskin and on the other a boot. She carries in her hands a little box, carefully, as if it contained her treasures, and is followed at a respectful distance by several juveniles of her own sex, similar to herself in personal appearance. She looks out for a victim, which the evening is blackened by vagrants, and teams of various kinds, and when, by her magic, a company groups of waiting foot-passengers, she commences operations. When she has approached her victim, she states her woe with the buskin on her foot, and sprains her ankle in the effort, and then's her knee. Her box has fallen from her hands, which contains, which consists of two or three rags and a cinder, a glass dack, a painted stick, and a stick of wasting wax, and which all she has in pieces; but she remains a few moments on the sidewalk, with her head averted, unconscious of her loss, and then slowly gets up, smiling sweetly, and trying to the sympathizing by-standers that she is not much hurt. The crowd tops then most of her wares, and the falls again upon the pavement and disappears in a twinkling. The companions pick up the frag ments, and the girl, putting her thumb to her nose, and so on.

The patriot gentleman, who witnessed one of these scenes on Saturday morning, was so much pleased that he contributed five-pence, in cheap silver consolation. He then left the scene of his labors, intending to write out her case for the reading portraits, and pursued his way with a lighter step than usual. In another part of the City, he met with a similar accident, which, with the exception of the sex of the sufferer, and his generosity, were the same. He was shocked that he walked up to the sufferer, and was shocking to see she had not fainted. The crowd, who stood ready in their pockets, and when the Gifted Girl was her relief and energetic remarks, the Gifted Girl take that peculiar mould which the Gifted Girl knows.

We think the public will now lose all confidence in the Gifted Girl.

Shoots Both the Front Door!

Last night it would be more "convenient" for the gentleman who had not come home, to enter the dwelling unbolted. About 8 o'clock in the evening, the ladies, sewing in the library, heard the front door open and shut, and steps ascend the front stairs, which sounded like the step of the master, and they supposed that all was right. But after a little while, time and the steps not returning from the chamber, Bridget was sent up with a candle to learn the matter. Presently, down came the maid with a scream and a jump! Oh, there was a burglar crouching up in the attic! The ladies screamed and fainted, and each a time as they fell. The neighbors next door were making merry with some candy in their kitchen. They paused, as they pulled the baked sweetness long drawn out, to listen to the screams. Then their door-bell pealed and rattled spasmodically, and Santa be-[illegible] the ladies in distress! The gal[illegible] of the house jumped to the rescue; and Mr. Nora was dispatched for a policeman. The combined the mains, one after another, armed to the teeth with fire-pokers, candles, and a bed-slat.

Finally, up in a corner of the attic, they discovered an Irish gentleman in red shirt and blue over-alls. After some long arguments, they beleagured the fellow, who, unlike as Don Quixote did the windmills, they then found him hand and foot, with the bed-cord, and tumbled him down stairs, into the hands of the policeman—whom Nora, after long wandering about, like an Evangeline, had at last discovered somewhere. The rogue departed, apologizing to the ladies for the mistaken the mansion for a friend's residence.

This happened last Wednesday evening, at No. 128 West-Twenty-fifth-street, which is next door to No. 126.

The Italian Version of the Bible.

The Managers of the American Bible Society have been dissatisfied, in justice to the claims of the Society upon the charities of the American Churches and people, to put forth a warning to the public against certain individuals who have recently arrived in this country, and who are now engaged in making collections of money, in different cities, under the pretence of promoting the publication of a version of the Scriptures, in foreign language. Foremost among them is an individual of [illegible] a native of Italy, who is going about among the Churches to collect funds for publishing a new Italian translation, which he has prepared. The Bible Society cautions the public against giving their contributions for the publication of a new and imperfect translations. An improved Evangelical version already exists in the Italian tongue, and is now in course of publication in Switzerland, at the expense of the Society. The Managers suggest that when any new version of the Scriptures is, in a foreign language is presented to the public for patronage, the friends of the cause which the Bible Society aims to promote will do well to be very cautious in giving it their aid and encouragement; and we would suggest that while all good and benevolent people keep their hearts open, they neglect not to keep their eyes open also.

For Spring—The Old Brick Church.

Why don't they go up town? Simply because there is a question about the portion of the purchase money that must pay over to the City in case they should sell out. They want to sell, and pretty nearly everybody else wants them to, but this lien is in the way. The property is held under an old grant from the City, with a restriction as to the use to which it must be put. It has been thought that the moment it is employed for any other than church and cemetery purposes, the title under the grant is forfeited.

But the church is advised, that the terms of the grant, under which they hold, do not prohibit the appropriation of the premises, by any private use whatsoever, nor in any manner the which is not public, and that they might to sell for a great Store, or a hotel house, court-house, or so forth; and that they can sell the ground in fee simple, discharged of any burden imposed by the grant, except that the purchaser, granted the exemption of the City in consideration of its old grant receive a part of the [illegible] so serious the church should sell, but wants some of the proceeds of the sale than the church is willing to give away the question of the whole proceeds. The property is supposed to be worth [illegible] dollars, and it is just the spot for a new Post-Office.

Daily Normal School.

The registration and examination of pupils for the new Daily Normal School was commenced on Monday afternoon, of the Normal School Room, in the Male High School, in Grand-street, near Centre-street, and continued on the following days of Monday and Tuesday, and will be continued this morning, from 9 to 12 o'clock, for the benefit of gentlemen. The regular service will commence as soon as 140 female, and 60 male pupils are registered.

The Perils of Sleighing.

On Monday morning a verdict was rendered in the Common Pleas, in the case of HARVEY SPARKS vs. MILES J. BURGESS, for suing the plaintiff a sleigh with an insufficient pole, which breaking, caused the horses to bolt, and throw the sleighing part of their vehicle. The damage was laid at $650, and the plaintiff got $50.

Passing Counterfeit Money.

JOHN SMITH alias EDWARD FISHER, was arrested on Monday night for passing a counterfeit $10 bill at the store of JAMES ANDERSON, in Sixth-avenue, and attempting to pass another of the same kind at a store in the same street. He was committed for examination by Justice FLAMMEAU.

Lectures on Microscopic Anatomy—A bit of Physiology.

Dr. E. H. PARKER, Professor of Anatomy at the New-York Medical College, concluded his course of four lectures on the STRUCTURE OF PLANTS AND ANIMALS on Monday evening. The most interesting illustration was the exhibition of the circulation of the blood in the transparent web of the frog's foot. The instrument beautifully displayed the rapid course in appropriate vessels of the ultimate cells, which, with their metallic coloring, float in the compound liquid, known as the blood. These in the human subject are round, slightly flattened, and thirty-two thousand of them strung on a thread would occupy an inch. A valuable fact is, that their shape in man is peculiar, differing in size and form from that of most animals and birds; hence the microscope is a valuable auxiliary in all medico-legal investigations where spots of blood may be indeterminate, as possibly that of a dog or a pigeon, and not that of a human being. Like a stream of molten and golden granules, these brilliant bodies tumble, follow, roll and chase each other along the minute arterial divisions, returning in a somewhat darker stream along the veins, forming a living picture, which, once seen, can never be forgotten.

A gentleman present, who examined this preparation, exclaimed characteristically enough: "We declare it molasses that live down-town, how much we lose." A drop of blood not half so large as a pin's head, being obtained with a needle from the finger and subjected to the same action, presented thousands of these same cellular bodies, of course nearly colorless, because transparent, but sufficiently red when aggregated numerously.

The great fact is, that these ultimate granules in the blood are in reality cells, having analogous physical conformation and being endowed with the same vital properties as the "ultimate cell" which elaborates within itself the material forming the bulk of all vegetable and animal tissues. Why, the closely-arranged "cells" in wood and in muscular fibre secrete each specially its own constituent, giving character to each particular solid, is, of course, unknown. Secretions were explained as formed in the same way, namely—from cell-formation. Thus, then, the same process is employed in building up and in removing by absorption vital structures, as is employed in the elaboration of milk, bile, urine, and all the secretions. The cells of the liver were clearly demonstrated, and reference made to the investigations of KIERNAN on that subject.

It is certain that of late years the positive revelations of the microscope to the sense of sight have done much to dispel baseless theory, and while opening a new world of adoration and praise to all healthy and well-constituted minds, much has been accomplished beyond the excitement of the faculty of wonder.

There is no scientific discovery, tested as such by the senses, that is devoid of its practical uses, and the application of microscopic anatomical facts is destined to modify and enlarge the capabilities of the healing art very sensibly. Even if negative, if it serve to satisfy us that some postulates are not true, much indirect information is thereby acquired.

The learned Professor having exhausted the subject of vegetable structures, passed rapidly in review during his latter lectures, the muscular, tendinous, glandular, nervous, bony, and other animal tissues, and demonstrated most incontestably the fact that cell-generation is the principle of construction alike in all living organisms.

At the close, Dr. GUNN, in a neat and expressive though brief address, moved that the Professor be requested to repeat his interesting demonstrations at his earliest possible convenience. The motion was seconded by Doctor DOUGLASS, and received with acclamation.

Sale of Pews.

Mr. RICHARD WARREN, officiating as auctioneer, the pews in the new Unitarian church of All Souls, (Rev. Dr. BELLOWS), at the corner of Fourth-avenue and Twentieth-street, were offered for sale to the highest bidders yesterday. The valuation of the pews varied from one hundred to twelve hundred dollars each, and the premiums bid varied from five dollars to three hundred and fifty dollars. The amount of premiums realized exceeded $4,500.

Launch.

A ship of 700 tons burden, 152 feet long, 33 feet beam, and 19 feet deep, was launched yesterday, at 1 o'clock P. M., from BELL's ship-yard, foot of Stanton-street, in presence of a large number of spectators, included in which were many ladies. She is owned by Messrs. SIMPSON & BRO., and will be placed by them in the Bordeaux trade. She is named the Kitty Simpson, will be commanded by Capt. BRANNON, and is a very handsome craft.

Miscellaneous.

DEATH OF A VETERAN.

An inquest was held yesterday by Coroner Gamble, at the New-York Hospital, upon the body of James D. Howe, one of the soldiers of 1812, who died from the effects of injuries received on the night of the previous Sunday. The deceased left his home, at No. 76 West Broadway, on the night in question, in company with two friends. He returned again about 10½ o'clock, when he was observed to be suffering from a wound in the head. Though able to walk, he was unable to give any account of himself, or of the manner in which the wound was received. He was removed to the New-York Hospital, where he lay in an unconscious state until the next night, when he died. The Jury declared that his death was caused by a fracture of the skull. The fatal injury is believed to have been caused by a fall in the street. Mr. Howe was 60 years of age, and a native of this City.

ASSAULTED IN THE STREETS.

A man, name unknown, while passing through Spruce-street about 11 o'clock on Monday night, was suddenly attacked by two ruffians, one of whom knocked him senseless to the pavement with a slung-shot. The Police arrived in time to convey the wounded man to the Fourth Ward Station-house.

THROWN FROM A SLEIGH.

ADAM KIHORN was seriously injured, Monday afternoon, by being thrown from his sleigh in Grand-street. The accident was occasioned by coming in collision with another vehicle, to which was attached a vicious horse. The injured man was taken to his residence by the Police.

DEAD INFANTS.

A still-born infant was found on Monday in a cigar-box, behind some timber in the rear of No. 11 Hammersly-street.

Some afternoon, the dead body of an infant was found in a wagon, in one of the streets of the Ninth Ward. It was taken to the Station-house, and the Coroner notified.

VESSEL ON FIRE.

The bark Henry Trowbridge, from Trinidad, while lying at the Government dock, at Quarantine, took fire on Monday morning from the stove-pipe, and after burning part of the cabin deck, was put out by the officers and crew of the revenue cutter Washington.

SUICIDE.

GRAND LARCENY.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM—Feb. 9.

DECISIONS.

In the matter of the Widening of the Bowery.—In this case the report of the Commissioners was confirmed at Special Term, and the objectors appealed. The Commissioners then moved to have the appeal dismissed, on the ground that the confirmation of a report of Commissioners at Special Term was final. The Court, by HARRIS, J., on Saturday rendered a decision granting the motion. Mr. Justice CLERKE, however, rendered a dissenting opinion.

This decision is one of great importance, as it, of course, puts a stop to any appeal from the decision of the Special Term in the Central Park matter.

Before Judge Daly.

SEARCH OF CONTRACT.

John Fitzpatrick vs. The Second-avenue Railroad Company.—This action was brought by the plaintiff as the assignee of Charles Devlin, who claimed to recover $949 50 for work and labor done for the Department under a contract to level lots at the corner of Second-avenue and Fifty-fourth-street. The defence set up was that no such contract ever existed, and that Devlin went to work on his own book until ordered by the employes of the Railroad Company to desist. The case stands adjourned.

SUPERIOR CONDITION MISMAN.

Before Judge Ingraham.

Harvey Sparks vs. Hy. Miner and H. M. Stearns.—This was an action for a breach of a warrantee. It appeared that the plaintiff, a Militia Colonel of this City, purchased last Winter a sleigh of the defendant for $125, which he supposed was warranted to be sound and of good quality. On taking it out with a pair of horses, during the sleigh festival of last year, the pole broke, the horses ran off and the Colonel was pitched into a mudhole. The damages claimed were $184 to repair the sleigh, and harness, and $300 for the injuries to the Colonel and the horses. On the part of the defence it was set up that no warrantee was given, but if there had been, the defendants were not liable, as they only sold the sleigh as the agents of a manufacturer who resided at Poughkeepsie. The Court charged the Jury that the main question for them to determine was that of warrantee, and the evidence on that point was conflicting. If there was a warrantee, and the article sold was not of the quality warranted, then the defendants were liable for all the consequences. If the Jury should find that the other damages were the result of the bad quality of the pole, then the defendants were liable for the repairs, the injuries to the horses and to the plaintiff. A sealed verdict was ordered.

Help for Kansas.

A meeting of the citizens of Worcester, Mass., was held on Saturday evening "to take such action as might be deemed advisable to strengthen the hearts and hands of those who are upholding the cause of freedom in Kansas." Rev. Mr. Adams, late District-Attorney, presided, and Hammond Bates, Esq., Representative in the General Court, was Secretary. Gen. POMEROY, of Kansas, addressed the meeting. Among other things, he said:

"We who settled in Kansas thought that we knew what we wanted. We saw the striking contrasts of prosperity, presented by the old States—between New-York without Slavery and Virginia with, between Pennsylvania and North Carolina, between Ohio and Kentucky, between Illinois and Missouri, and we determined to establish Free-Soil if we could. And when the struggle came, when 700 Missourians came over in a body to disposess us of our homes, we felt that it was our duty to organize against them and did not falter, that we might be spared the worse evil, we should be enslaved, we should have your sympathy and your aid."

Gen. POMEROY stated that he had been able to send to Gov. SHARPS, at his request, the money which had been generously contributed as a few months which he had been invited to speak in Worcester.

After the address of Gen. POMEROY, Rev. Mr. BATES, made a few remarks, which were then supported in the Hall.

"He said he was a peace man, and his offer to furnish a thousand superior rifles was based upon an earnest and sincere desire to prevent the shedding of blood. A large number of men were engaged in their manufacture in this city, and a portion of them would be completed in the coming week; but as it was desirable that some additional arms should be sent to the Territory at once, he proposed to pay for ten Sharpe's rifles, at $80 each, on condition that during the coming week other citizens of Worcester would subscribe enough to make up the number of one hundred rifles. Several gentlemen subscribed for a rifle, and sent their names to the Chair, and before the audience left the hall 33 rifles, equivalent to the sum of $2640, were subscribed for. Mr. TAPPAN's generous proposal was received with great applause, and a Committee of Three was appointed to solicit subscriptions for the requisite number. Of course they will find no difficulty in securing the material aid necessary."

[illegible] Northern Mexico.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, Feb. 5.

We have received the Monterey Redactor de la Libertad, of the 8th, 15th and 22d ult. They are principally occupied with Government decrees, all of which have already reached us from the capital direct.

They also comprise the proclamation of URAGA, with the invitation he addressed to VIDAURRI, and the reply of the latter. Altogether they occupy over five columns. The plan is in the first instances signed by JUAN J. JIMENEZ. Of course it condemns the conduct of the actual Government, and makes magnificent professions about liberty. JIMENEZ signs ostensibly a copy of the original, which purports to emanate from the "Territory and Forces of Sierra Gorda," and proclaims the Constitution of 1824, with the reforms subsequently made to it, and recognizes URAGA as General-in-Chief.

URAGA then accepts this nomination, declaring himself ready to support the law, the sovereignty of the people, the army, the clergy, and the church. In his address to VIDAURRI, inviting his support, he enters into a long explanation of his plan, and declares his abhorrence of civil war. VIDAURRI makes a very courteous diplomatic reply, speaking in very flattering terms of URAGA's position and person, but declines joining him, inviting URAGA instead to come and visit him, and confer on what they can both best do to benefit the country.

The extreme prices of yesterday were not fully maintained at the Stock Exchange to-day, nor was the excitement in speculation quite so high. The reaction, however, is less than 1 ₩ cent—and even this was not general through the list. The last price of Erie was 86⅛, against 87 yesterday; Reading 88¾, against 89¾; New-York Central 88, against 88¾; Illinois Central Bonds 87¼, against 88¼. The Western Road shares were even firmer than on Monday, and the short sellers of Michigan Southern were made to feel the penalties of what is known in Wall-Street as a corner. That is, they were unable to borrow, while unwilling to buy the Stock to meet their contracts, and were forced to pay as much as 101 for shares which they had sold, for the decline, at from 87 to 85 ₩ cent. The rapid advance, however, brought out a fair supply of Cash Stock at par@101, and in the afternoon—the deliveries of the day being over—sales were made at 99¾. The share list, generally, was less firm at the close than on Monday. State Stocks were well supported, and so were the Bonds of the Erie, Hudson River and New-York Central Roads. Erie Convertibles, of 1871, brought 85 ₩ cent., buyer 30 days, ex-dividend, and the Mortgage, of 1883, 86 ₩ cent. New-York Central 7s, 101¼.

There is no change to note in Money rates, although the tendency is to greater ease in demand loans. Some deposits have been left with the Stock Houses as low as 6 ₩ cent. Mercantile paper in request at from 8 to 10 ₩ cent. The additional business done early in the day in Foreign Bills for the Boston mail, was at 109 for London, and 5.21¼@5.20 for French; a few retail sales of the former at 109¼. A line of £20,000 Bank bills taken at 109 ₩ cent. The mail was somewhat enlarged for this opportunity by the apprehension that no steamer will be in readiness to take the place of the Pacific on Saturday. We hear of no Specie remittances. The Sub-Treasury received to-day $172,160; paid $2,298, and held at the close a regular balance of $1,587,168.

The interest felt for the fate of the Pacific, now in her 21st day out increases, though the hope is strong that whatever accident she met with was in the early part of the voyage, and that she put back to Liverpool.

The excitement in the Cotton market for a day or two past has been almost equal to that in Stocks. Telegraphic advices were received from New-Orleans to-day to the effect that 20,000 bales sold on Monday in that market at 9¾ cents for Middlings. There
